Mayro, quickest to begin, withstood determined opposition from Yetive before reaching the stretch, and drew out through the closing furlong. Yetive, away alertly, displayed good speed throughout. Miss Marlboro, unable to keep pace early, closed with a rush on the outside, was traveling the fastest of all at the close. Little Audrey was always well placed, though faltering in the closing stride. Portuit, on the outside while racing close up, early was unable to keep place in the drive. Percent went evenly. Lady Day made up some ground. Trauning, caught in a jam shortly after the start, had to be eased back rounding the far turn. Opera was snuffled back at the start. Lady Milly stopped badly after a brief flash of speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs, $1000, for three-year-olds and up, claiming. Start good from Rahr Gate. Won driving, place same. Went 2:08, off 2:03½. Value to winner $700, $350, $210, $30. Time—:23 4-5; :47 3-5; 1:13 1-5.

Forced Landing, here hustled to get to the front, drew clear, saved ground in the stretch, fought it out gamely with Midnight Flyer. The latter well placed while racing Restrained, moved up steadily on the outside, made a bold bid to get to the front but was not good enough. Loloma, in close quarters nearing the far turn, closed boldly when obtaining clear sailing. Morgil was away fast, lacked speed to keep up with the leaders in the closing drive. Orchidia was well placed the entire way and had no excuses. General A, sore going to the post, trailed early and passed tiring horses through the stretch. Lum Joy was under urging for the first half-mile in an effort to keep forwardly placed. Fortunate Youth rallied after making a bid on the outside approaching the turn out of the stretch.

THIRD RACE—One mile and one-sixteenth, purse $1000, for four-year-olds and up, claiming. Start good from Rahr gate, won handily, place driving. Went 3:24, off 3:27. Value to winner, $700, $150, $70, $30. Time—:24 1-5, :49 4-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 1-5, 1:47 4-5.

Amador, under a checking pull while being restrained off the pace, appeared ready to go to front at the asking, swung to the outside in the stretch, wore the leaders down readily to win going away. Bye Bye Mary went to the front in the run to the first turn, withstood determined opposition from Upercut, disposed of him but was unable to meet the challenge of the winner. Retribution dropped back in the opening three furlongs, began improving her position steadily thereafter and was going willingly at the end. Playmore came determinedly on the outside in the stretch run. Upercut tired after going about seven furlongs. Balmacan was never a threat. Overstimate went wide at the first turn and was far back throughout. Miss Boy trailed the entire way.

30,000 CHEER WINNERS AT 'GANSETT

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, May 2—Ninetern persons each collected $1,070.90 in the daily double here today when Mayro won the first race and Amador took the third race.

Myro was the favorite in the first race, while Amador wasn't given much of a chance of winning in the third race.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., May 2—Allen Z, furnished a startling upset when he won the Narragansett Handicap.

Allen Z., with Mack Winters up, was overlooked in the betting and paid $74.60 to win.

INDIANS PLAY UNDER SPINAL FEVER BAN

Two home runs by Joe Vosmik and one by Earl Averill gave the Isolated Indians four runs.

A last-minute decision gave the Indians grace. All morning they had been isolated in a hotel while city health physicians took temperatures to determine if any had been infected by the dread disease that laid Campbell low.

Dr. William B. Keeler, city health commissioner, said he saw no danger either to spectators or to the opposing Boston baseball players.

Miss Ann Marsters, ace woman handicapper of New England, made merry at the expense of the horses running at the big tracks today.

Miss Marsters, out of four selections, hit two dead on the nose, her other two being just beaten out for the win money.

Mayro won the opener at Narragansett to pay the fine price of $6.10. Sation captured the fourth at Jamaica and returned $6.40.

Murph has beaten a half length in the third at Churchill and Jackie D. was beaten by the nicest nose in a photo finish of the fourth at Narragansett.

G-MAN TELLS OF KARPIS CAPTURE

St. Paul, May 2 (AP)—Alvin Karpis, the nation's No. 1 criminal who boasted he "wouldn't be taken alive" but who was "scared to death" when federal agents seized him in New Orleans, was held today in the federal building while authorities questioned him regarding three kidnapings and other crimes.

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Department of Investigation who led the capture, related details of how Karpis was trapped in New Orleans yesterday and how he "turned yellow" at the last moment.

'KARPIS IS RAT, TOO SCARED TO TALK,' SAYS HOOVER

SHAKING 'BAD MAN' HELD IN CHAINS; GIRL SEIZED

"Karpis said he'd never be taken alive," said Hoover, "but we took him without firing a shot. That marked him as a dirty yellow rat. He was scared to death when we closed in on him. He shook all over—his voice, his hands and his knees."

The investigation department chief disclosed Karpis had reported to plastic surgery on his face, but that despite alterations which included cuts from the lobes of each ear, he was easily recognizable from his photographs.

The outlaw was flown here chained in an airplane and guarded by the guns of eight G-men.

Hoover said Karpis was wanted for three kidnapings, the William Hamm and Edward G. Bremer abductions here, and that of a doctor whose car was commandeered after the gangster shot his way out of a trap in Atlantic City, N. J. He is under indictment for both the Hamm and Bremer kidnapings which yielded ransom of $300,000.

Karpis also was accused of slaying a sheriff, 15 bank robberies, three or four mail holdups and complicity in the slaying of "three or four other men," Hoover said.

MAY FREE GIRL

Karpis was held temporarily in the Federal building and federal officials declined to say when he would be moved to the county jail.

George F. Sullivan, United States district attorney, said he had no plans yet for arraigning the prisoner.

The woman known as "Ruth" captured with Fred Hunter and Karpis was identified by Hoover as a woman who posed as Mrs. Ruth Hunter but who, in reality, is not Hunter's wife.

Hoover said she was held in New Orleans without charge and indicated she may be released after questioning.

"Karpis was quite a fisherman and a hunter," Hoover said. "He was in and out of New Orleans."

"When we had definite information he was in New Orleans, we surrounded the apartment house.

"We nabbed the three after they had entered their car. There was a rifle in the back seat, but neither Karpis nor Hunter had a chance to reach for it. Neither carried pistols.

"Within three minutes after their arrest, there were more than a thousand people swarming round Karpis' car and the apartment house."

TOO SCARED TO TALK

Asked Karpis' reaction when he was told to throw up his hands, Hoover said:

"He was so damned scared he couldn't talk!"

Hoover said the department was "glad to take him alive" and that capture of the No. 1 badman "rings down the curtain on all the principals in the Barker-Karpis case."

When asked whether Harry Campbell, fugitive in the Bremer kidnaping and pal of Karpis, now would be designated as Public Enemy No. 1, Hoover said:

"We don't give them any rating in the federal bureau of investigation. They are all yellow rats to us. That was proven last night."

Escorted personally by Hoover and a squad of picked agents, Karpis was landed slightly more than 12 hours after the heavily armed party flew northward out of New Orleans.

The desperado, wearing thin summer apparel in a temperature just above freezing, was hustled from the big liner to a heavily armed automobile, surrounded by machine guns, and taken direct to the agents' headquarters in the federal building.

FACES BIG CHARGES

At Washington, the postoffice inspection service said efforts would be made to try Karpis for the Garretsville, O., train robbery last November unless he were given a death sentence in an earlier trial.

If Karpis is given a long sentence or life imprisonment, the Garretsville charge will be pressed. A $2000 reward offered by postoffice inspectors will not be available unless Karpis is convicted for the Garretsville robbery.

Within an hour after his arrival Hoover met reporters in the federal building. At the airport the plane had been backed into a National Guard hangar, with the transfer from the liner to an automobile being made behind closed doors.

CHAINED IN PLANE

Making a short stop in St. Louis for refueling around midnight, the party was tied up in Kansas City from 2 a. m., until 5:30 a. m. because of unfavorable flying weather.

During the entire trip and stops the prisoner was manacled inside the plane.

Upon arrival here his feet scarcely touched the earth as the agents hurried him from the plane to the waiting car, thence to the federal building.

Hoover, who said he planned to go by airplane to New York this afternoon, divulged some of the details of Karpis' capture. He emphasized no reward would be paid by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, an indication no "tips" were received from persons seeking the $7000 price offered for Karpis' arrest recently.

The arrival and subsequent handling of the desperado was marked by speed and efficiency. The big liner whirled in from the south, circled the airport once, banked into the stiff wind, glided to a smooth landing, and was taxied up to the entrance to the large air squadron hangar.

The huge doors slid open and before anyone had left the plane it was rolled inside.

The heavily manacle Karpis was transferred from the plane to an automobile inside the hangar.

The route feom the airport to the federal building was patrolled by police squad cars and deputy sheriffs.

The nation-wide hunt for Karpis began with the finding of his fingerprints on a gasoline can and a flashlight dropped by the Bremer kidnap mob.

Earlier crimes attributed to him and his gang did not come under the department's juriadiction.

The robberies and kidnapings of this group of hoodlums in three years caused the deaths of at least five persons, four of them policemen, and about $500,000 cash loss.

To the law abiding parents of Karpis, Mr. and Mrs. John Karpavics of Chicago, the arrest was the climax of a long criminal career.

"Why tell me about it?" demanded Karpavics, an apartment house janitor.

Hunter and the mystery girl were questioned throughout the night by David McGee, head of the New Orleans bureau, and other Federal agents.

The girl presented a trim, slight figure in a becoming white hat, white shoes and white checked dress. She appeared to be in her early twenties.

Agents scoffed at a question that she might have provided the "tip-off" as did the recently deported alien, Anna Sage, the "woman in red" in the John Dillinger case.

Mystery Girl Seized With Karpis Hides Identity

New Orleans, May 2 (AP)—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents who rushed Alvin Karpis and captured him and two companions here last night, said today that a search of the Karpis' apartment, where he resided for about a month with "Ruth" had yielded plenty.

Magee refused to go into any details as to what evidence had been found in the apartment.

He likewise refuses to discuss the identity of "Ruth," or details of the surprise springing of the trap in which nearly a score of agents led by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the bureau in Washington, pounced upon Karpis, disarmed and captured him without a fight, and then seized Hunter and the girl.

FINGERPRINTS CHECKED

Magee said he did not know the identity of Ruth but that her fingerprints were being checked in Washington in an effort to learn whether she was wanted by the government.

Throughout the night the girl, in her early twenties, was grilled along with Hunter in the offices of the bureau of investigation on the third floor of the federal building while Karpis was flown by plane to St. Paul.

Said Hunter were furnished pots, bedding and meals in the offices of Magee and have not made their appearance outside of the building since they were taken in early last night after the raid on the Canal street apartment house.

All night long the lights burned and officers with machine guns and pistols guarded the prisoners. They said both refused to talk and that Ruth refused to identify herself.

SACK OVER HER HEAD

A group of federal agents held the apartment of Karpis under guard while they searched and no one was admitted to the building.

Throughout the night in the corridors of the federal building underlings of the questioning of the two prisoners could be heard, but the conversation was almost inaudible.

Now and then one of the prisoners would be escorted out to an anteroom and the corridor would be cleared temporarily.

Federal agents surrounded Hunter when he was brought out and "Ruth" appeared in the corridor once with a white sack over her head to shield her face. The corridors swarmed with armed government men.

RATTLE OF CHAINS

The agents indicated that the prisoners might be removed to some other location during the day.

At times the rattling of Hunter's chains could be heard outside of the room as if he were moving about or under a nervous strain. He was both shackled and chained, hands and feet.

Meantime the federal investigators refused to answer any questions about how they were tipped off that Karpis was in New Orleans, or how they managed to locate him and his apartment.

Hoover, before leaving on the Karpis plane, said briefly that he had been working on the Karpis case for two years.

Asked how long he had been working on the New Orleans end of it he replied:

"We knew he had been in and out of New Orleans for the past two months."

VICTIMS CHEERED

Hoover and other federal men declined to discuss this angle of the case or comment on rumors in New Orleans that persons who had seen or been with the desperado were responsible for the important tip.

Victims of the St. Paul kidnapings were cheered by news of the arrest. Seven of Karpis' associates in the gang dominated by the late Kate (Ma) Barker are dend and the others are all imprisoned.

"Congratulations again to the Department of Justice," said Hamm, "for a mighty tough task so nobly done."

Brewer termed it "a further tribute" to the department.

Whether Karpis would be brought to trial on the kidnaping charges immediately, however, was a question. Hoover said he was

Owner Seizes His Stolen Car, Man

During the five minutes that William Putman of Auburn, R. I., was delivering a bundle to a friend at 1176 Boylston street today some one took his automobile.

Putman went into a drug store and reported the theft. Then he sauntered up the street and a block away saw his machine with a young man in it.

Putman leaped into the car and forced the occupant to drive around until halted by Patrolman Harold Quinn, who had been warned to watch for the registration.

SHIP ON ROCKS WITH 41 MEN

With 41 men in her crew, the freighter Minnesotan of the American-Hawaiian line ran aground half a mile off Monomy Point, Cape Cod, today.

Two Coast Guard cutters, the Algonquin from Boston and the Mohave from offshore duty, were dispatched to the Minnesotan's aid.

A power boat from Monomoy Point Coast Guard Station was also sent out, under direction of Boatswain's Mate George Hallett. The boat carried a crew of four.

Despite the clear sun in Boston, there was a dense fog off the Cape. The tide will not be high again until nearly 10 p. m.

Pershing to Visit Town of His Birth

Laclede, Mo., May 2 (AP)—Old friends and neighbors of General John J. Pershing welcomed him back to his birthplace today for the third time since the World War.

Hundreds of Linn County school children, including pupils of the Prairie Mound School where Pershing taught two terms, came to see the commander of the American Expeditionary Force take part in cornerstone ceremonies at a new school building.

Moley on Cruise With Roosevelt

Washington, May 2 (AP)—Accompanied by Raymond Moley, former assistant secretary of state, who has been critical of some recent New Deal proposals, President Roosevelt boarded the cutter Potomac this afternoon for an overnight cruise.

A number of other guests also were aboard as the craft moved down the Potomac river for Chesapeake Bay.

HUNTER'S KIN GRILLED

Cleveland, May 2 (AP)—The father and a brother of Fred Hunter, arrested with Alvin Karpis in New Orleans, and a waitress in the brother's beer parlor were held incommunicado in the Warren, O., city jail today.

Federal authorities said they sought to learn the disposition of loot of $46,000 taken in the Garrettsville, O., mail train robbery last Nov. 7.

The three held were George Hunter, father, who lives on a farm near Warren; Albert Hunter, brother, operator of a tavern, and Mary Yoho, a waitress in Hunter's establishment.

6 Prison Guards Slashed in Riot

Jackson, Mich., May 2 (INS)—Six southern Michigan penitentiary guards were slashed and slugged in a brief but fierce battle with a group of prisoners, headed by three negroes.

The rebellion was crushed after guards beat two of the negroes into submission. The third managed to make his way to a hiding place within the walls and was being sought this afternoon.

None of the guards was believed to have suffered serious injuries.

2 Youths Rescued After Canoe Upset

Thrown into Quincy bay when their canoe was overturned by high wind, two Houghs Neck youths were rescued today by employes of the Nut Island pumping station.

Robert Bruce, 23, and Robert Cumming, 17, were paddling 100 yards off shore when their craft was upset. They clung to the upturned canoe while drifting into the bay. Philip Mahoney and George Bartlett, attached to the station, noticed their plight, put out in a power boat, and rescued them.

$1,500,000,000 WPA Job Fund Approved

Washington, May 2 (INS)—The $1,500,000,000 Works Progress Administration fund sought by President Roosevelt to help keep 3,500,000 people on relief jobs in the next year today was approved by the House appropriations sub-committee on the deficiency bill.

Robber Suspects Seized

Toronto, May 2 (AP)—Two men wanted in connection with bank robberies in Toronto and Winnipeg were captured after a gun battle today. One of the men, who said his name was George Little, was wounded seriously.

LANDON STATE CHIEFS AFTER DELEGATES

Encouraged by the huge Landon landslide at the recent presidential preference primary, Massachusetts Republicans today rallied to place the name of Alf M. Landon before the national convention at Cleveland as the choice of the Bay State delegation for President.

First action by state Landon leaders to contact the delegates elected at the primary will be submission to them of pamphlets and books dealing with the executive ability of the Kansas Governor.

These will be in the hands of the delegates not later than Tuesday of next week. Following this action a personal plea on behalf of Governor Landon will be made.

It is doubtful if Republicans have ever had presented to them such a forceful mandate from the people, as the primary vote.

YOUTH VOLUNTEERS

Edwin F. Parker, president of the Landon-for-President Club with headquarters in the Parker House and leader of the Landon forces in Massachusetts, said:

"Practically 75 per cent of those volunteering to work for the election of Governor Landon of Kansas are young men, mothers and farmers.

"They believe there is still left in this country 'real patriotism' and they are hungry to be part of the movement that will bring prosperity and contentment to the nation at large.

"They do not like the way things are going. They are sick and tired of mistakes. They dislike the name 'old time politicians.'

"The most remarkable thing about the Landon movement, which by the way is gathering a tremendous force each day, is that the workers are volunteers.

"Another most significant fact is that we are receiving into our forces so-called New Dealers who are disgusted with administration policies."

G. O. P. CHIEFS OFFER AID

Many leading Republican leaders in the state have offered their services in the coming campaign to place the name of Landon before the Cleveland convention.

Representative Phillip Bowker of Brookline has been active as has Representative Phillip Sherman of Somerville. The latter has been appointed chairman of the state organization committee.

N. Y. Republican Leaders Find Swing Is to Landon

New York, May 2 (US)—With the popular demand for the presidential nomination of Governor Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, gaining in volume daily, New York Republican leaders who had flirted with the idea of joining a "stop-Landon" move prepared today for a quick about face.

Reports from all parts of the East convinced them Landon had caught the popular fancy.

Leaders who, less than two weeks ago, were openly doubtful of Landon's nomination today were predicting the selection of the Kansan on the first ballot. His election, they insist, is certain to follow.

ALL FOR LANDON

Warren R. Ashmead, Queens county Republican leader, who had arranged a meeting at the Odd Fellows Hall, Jamaica, for tonight, commenting on the swing to Landon, said:

"It seems to me every Republican I talk with in my county is for Landon.

"When I arranged for our meeting in Jamaica, at which Senator Steiwer, who is to be the keynoter at the convention, will be the principal speaker, I purposely engaged a small hall. I made a mistake.

"The call for tickets has already exceeded the capacity of the hall. It wasn't intended to be a Landon meeting but I wouldn't be surprised if that is what it turned out to be."

SEE G. O. P. VICTORY

It was the belief of the majority of the committee present that the nomination of Governor Landon would insure the election of a Republican governor in New York.

Tonight's meeting in Jamaica undoubtedly will set the pace for a much more intensive campaign in behalf of Landon.

Landon meetings will offer the voters in those states not having presidential preference primaries an opportunity to register their wishes as emphatically as did the voters in Massachusetts at the recent primary in that state. Governor Landon was the 10 to 1 victor over all other candidates.

Similar reports are coming from New Jersey.

Henry W. Jeffers, Republican state chairman of New Jersey, who is in charge of the organization's campaign to elect a solid Landon delegation in the primaries on May 19, said:

"Practically every prominent Republican in the state has expressed a preference for Governor Landon. Local leaders, in close touch with the voters of their districts, report an almost unanimous Landon sentiment."

Los Angeles, May 2—"May Day," devoted to labor in foreign parts, was celebrated variously.

Moscow paraded tens of thousands of well-armed troops through the Red Square, where the corpse of Lenin lies embalmed. Three hundred war tanks thundering on the ground, seven hundred and fifty war planes roaring in the air, emphasized Stalin's boast to Japan and the world:

"If you think you can conquer us, come and try."

Chancellor Hitler, having defied France, England and the League of Nations successfully, celebrated the day with a plea for peace.

Parades in Spain carried many Red banners; New York saw a parade of Socialists and Communists, the Communist tail wagging the Socialist dog, as usually happens when one believes in action, and the other believes in talk.

Joe Bowers, mail robber, tried to escape from Alcatraz, government island prison in San Francisco bay. Prison Guard Chandler's painful duty was to kill Joe Bowers; he told about it in prison guard language at the inquest.

"I saw Bowers edging toward a fence, and I yelled, 'all right, let's go.'" (Strange remark under the circumstances.) "I picked up Mary Ann (prison guard name for rifle) and fired a couple of low ones to get him in the leg. But he went over the fence. So I levelled Mary Ann and let him have it. I knew if he got into the bay, God knows where he would go next."

The desperate criminal was dead when his body came sliding down the cliff and into the water. The body was recovered, but as for Joe Bowers himself, in the words of the prison guard, "God knows where he will go next."

Mr. K. Ikeda, Japanese gentleman, tells how his associate, inventor of real pearl production, Mr. K. Mikimoto, makes $50,000,000 a year.

On Palaos, tiny island of the South Seas, near Uncle Sam's island of Guam, millions of oysters are planted on 43 acres. Women make a slit in the oyster muscle, insert a small fragment of mother of pearl, sew up the slit with silk and "plant" the oyster.

Each oyster covers the irritating particle with real pearl, to stop the scratching. A pearl, big as a large pea, worth $1000, is grown in seven years.

You learn from Mr. Mikimoto of Japan that profit is still possible for the man who has a new idea and is willing to work.

Some correspondents say Italy has already occupied Addis Ababa, others are uncertain. That Ethiopia has become ITALIAN is quite certain. That the thing should be done in six months, under the most difficult circumstances conceivable, is proof of the energy that Mussolini put into his men; it is the enthusiasm that always comes with a revolutionary movement at first.

Revolution came to France and swept aside the power of Europe, while it lasted. It came in Russia, and Western Europe was powerless against it. It came in Germany with Hitler, and the Versailles treaty and Rhineland agreement were swept aside; the German army was rebuilt.

Mussolini is helped by African tribes, who cheerfully hire themselves out to kill other tribes, as hounds gladly chase their brothers, the fox and the wolf.

Sympathizers with the Ethiopian barbarians and their cunning rulers and exploiters from Arabia may find comfort in the fact that slavery will cease under Mussolini; debtors will no longer have the right hand cut off for failure to pay; small boys will not be hideously mutilated to supply the demand for eunuchs; the Ethiopian witch doctors will be put to work, or in jail, and hyenas will be killed off, with no more witch doctors to placate them with magic.

Ethiopia's land will be cultivated, natives will be paid, not lashed, for working on it; the higher civilization of Italy will be transplanted there—all most desirable.

BOSTON FILM HOPEFULS AT TEA

Society now beckons to the leading members of the cast of "It Happened in Boston," the all-local film, sponsored by the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser and Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres, following a brief fling with radio personalities.

A tea, given by Mrs. Charles Butler of Newton at 123 Commonwealth avenue, was attended by Marion Flynn of Norwood, Jean Budding of Newton, Barbara Keith of Brookline, Hester Dinnerman and "Kewpie" Harrison of Boston and Morris Emerson Davie (Jeremy West) of West Newton.

Among society notables whom the young people met at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. Louis Frothingham, Countess Rosanska, Mrs. Timothee Adamowski and a score or more of others.

The players were photographed with Mrs. Anderson, who stated that she and her friends would endeavor to attend the opening engagement of the screen play when it is shown in Boston next week, the tentative date of which is Friday, May 8. It will be shown at Loew's State and Orpheum theatres.

It was asserted today that a very prominent society woman of Newton is planning a luncheon for the group of players to be held at the Brae Burn Country Club within a few days.

"It Happened in Boston" will also be exhibited in Hollywood shortly, at which time it is anticipated that one or more members of the cast may be called there for a motion picture career.

Tributes Are Paid Late Judge Bishop

With members of the family and scores of friends of bench and bar attending, memorial services were conducted today in Suffolk Superior Court for Judge Elias B. Bishop, who died last year.

Judge Marcus Morton presided, with eight other justices in attendance. Hugh L. Ogden, representing the Boston Bar Association, offered a memorial resolution, which was ordered spread upon the records by Judge Morton.

Tributes were paid by Mr. Ogden, former Attorney-General Herbert Parker, former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and Arthur W. Bickford. Judge Morton, explaining that Judge Alonzo R. Wood was present at the services, presiding, also paid tribute to the memory of the deceased justice.

Brothers Held As Tipsy Drivers

Brockton, May 2—Galen and Emery Dean, Oak street brothers, were held today after a tussle with a policeman, both on charges of operating the same car while under the influence of liquor.

Patrolman John D. Walsh testified he saw the car in North Main street. One of the Dean brothers was at the wheel. A moment later he said the other was in the driver's seat. Both pleaded not guilty and were held in $250.

Death-Bed Clue Spurs Slayer Hunt

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 2 (AP)—Working on varying death-bed statements, police today hunted a "nice looking" young man for the fatal beating of pretty Mrs. Eulia Mae McConnell.

Detectives said the 23-year-old wife of a theater manager and mother of twin baby girls may have been the victim either of a maniac or a rejected suitor.

Mrs. McConnell, found beaten and slashed in her apartment Thursday, died yesterday, after giving rambling and conflicting accounts of the attack while in a semi-conscious condition.

Lucerne, Switzerland, May 2 (AP)—The wreckage of a Swiss mail plane of the Frankfort-Basel line, missing since Thursday, was found today with the bodies of its crew of two on Rigi Mountain, near Lucerne.

Hands Up!

San Luis Obispo, Cal., May 2 (AP)—The city's World Fair relic, a German cannon, occupied a new position on the courthouse lawn today because Benjamin Cerini didn't like to have the barrel pointing at his house.

Cerini complained that the position of the gun made him nervous, although it has no firing pin and its long barrel is plugged with concrete.

Anti-Balm Jurist Forces a Mistrial

New York, May 1 (INS)—One juror, who is opposed to breach-of-promise suits, today had caused a mistrial in Countess Claire de Bulow's $300,000 suit against Maurice Manasse, wealthy broker.

The mistrial was declared by Supreme Court Justice Koch after a comic opera interchange of "you did sos" and "I didn't eithers" between jurors in the case.

Fine Auto Man $125 In Hit-Run Case

Worcester, May 2—Patrolman William H. Adams waved his flashlight as he stood in the path of an alleged hit-run car, fired two shots in the air, finally leaped upon the running board and halted the driver at gunpoint, he testified in court today.

He arrested Ellery C. Moulton, 36, an automobile dealer, of Pleasant street. Miss Lynn Bartlett, attractive Milbury street girl, was in the machine at the time, Patrolman Adams said. She was slightly hurt.

Ellery was charged with having driven into a parked car in Providence street. Then, said the policeman, the machine backed away from the wreckage, lights extinguished, and started to go away. Adams said he saw the whole thing.

An additional charge of driving under the influence of liquor was made against Ellery. Ellery was fined $125. He appealed.

2 Police Laid Off, Found Spinal Case

Patrolman Patrick C. Gannon and Martin F. Quinn have been relieved from duty until May 19 because they were in contact with a victim of spinal meningitis, it was announced today.

They picked up Michael Barry, 33, of State street, Marlboro, when he collapsed in Broad street, and rushed him to City Hospital on April 27. The next day they were sent home and the ambulance fumigated. Neither officer has shown symptoms.

LOTTERY Roundup, 3 HELD

ARRESTS HERE AND IN N. J.

The first three of the 25 men secretly indicted by the federal grand jury in connection with the fake lottery clean-up in Massachusetts were arrested today by Post Office Inspectors.

One was booked as Joseph G. DeGrenier, 29, of Bennington street, East Boston. He was arrested by Post Office Inspector Chester A. Anderson.

The other two, Irving Orange of Newark, N. J., and Joseph Marks of Elizabeth, N. J., were arrested in Newark by Post-office Inspector Tennyson Jefferson of the Boston district, on a capias.

The latter two will be brought here, arriving tomorrow.

It is expected the other 22 men will be picked up in short order. Meanwhile, more evidence continues to pile in today, with new indictments in prospect.

Two days ago, when the indictments were returned, word seeped out that federal agents were scattered through Massachusetts and Canada planning a major gambling roundup.

The investigation was directed at fake lotteries billed as benefiting institutions which do not exist.

Snowball Game At Westwood

While the mercury reached almost 80 in Brgton this afternoon, two and a half feet of snow was discovered in the Westwood Cemetery by Edward Wyman, a cemetery employe. He was digging into a pile of earth at the time in order to get a some loam.

Attracting the attention of the laborers at one end of the cemetery, they started to throw snowballs at one another.

After about 15 minutes of this new "summer thrill" the men went back to work. They had been working on a project calling for the enlarging of the cemetery.

Danish Princess May Be Britain's Queen

BRIDAL NEXT YEAR, STORY IN LONDON

New York, May 2 (US)—King Edward VIII of Great Britain and Princess Alexandrine Louise of Denmark, his 21-year-old third cousin and niece of two reigning kings, will announce their betrothal in the autumn, the New York Daily Mirror declared in a copyrighted story from London.

They will be married next year, the Daily Mirror stated, and Britain's new queen will sit beside her royal husband at the coronation ceremonies.

Princess Alexandrine is the daughter of Prince Harald, brother of King Christian X of Denmark and King Haakon VII of Norway.

The newspaper reported in part:

"Although all reports of the coming royal marriage have been kept from the British press and public, the facts that King Edward would end his long bachelorhood and that the Danish princess had been selected as his Queen, have been known to intimates at the royal household for months.

"When Parliament earlier this week provided an appropriation of 40,000 pounds (about $200,000) a year 'to provide for the contingency of the King's marriage,' members of His Majesty's cabinet in the House of Commons and leaders in the House of Lords knew that the contingency would shortly become a fact.

Secret Betrothal

"Actually, Princess Alexandrine and the King have been secretly engaged for more than a year. The proposal came while Britain's reigning monarch was still Prince of Wales and while his father, the late King George V., was still alive.

"It was last May when Princess Alexandrine, an attractive brunette, then just turned 20 years of age, visited London for the celebration of King George's jubilee.

"The announcement was to have been made simultaneously in London and Copenhagen early this year. Originally, also, the plans were to have the marriage of the then Prince of Wales and Princess Alexandrine take place during the latter part of this June.

"It will be recalled that, toward the end of last year, the announcement was made that the royal courts — at which King George and Queen Mary received diplomatic and international nobility and society — were to be postponed until a later date.

"This, it is now understood, was in order that the future queen could be presented to court as the principal debutante of the season.

Death Halts

"The death of the king, of course, upset all these plans. The traditional period of mourning, shortened by Edward VIII in the present instance to nine months instead of the usual year, has postponed any announcement until the autumn.

"The royal marriage now is scheduled to take place some time in the early part of next year; it may even precede by only a few days the coronation ceremonies.

"It is even being said by close friends of the royal family that, although the royal betrothal had been arranged by King George and King Christian, Edward—after he ascended the throne—insisted that he must have the personal acceptance of his proposal from his future bride.

"After this acceptance had been sent him, he called into conference his chancellor, and it was then that Neville Chamberlain surprised Parliament and the world at large with the announcement that "His Majesty wishes the House to consider the contingency of the King's marriage . . ."

Father of Princess Denies Knowing of Troth

Copenhagen, May 2 (INS)—Prince Harald, father of Princess Alexandrine Louise of Denmark, today denied knowledge of a report from London that King Edward VIII of Britain and the princess will announce their betrothal next autumn.

The prince, who is a brother of King Christian of Denmark and King Haakon of Norway, when informed of the report, said:

"That is a good joke. I don't know anything about it. It is all imagination. You may deny it. There is nothing about an engagement or a wedding."

ROMANO GUILTY IN HOLDUP

In a sealed verdict returned today, George Romano was found guilty of armed robbery of the United Drug Company on Forsyth street, Roxbury, last January 23, and was held in $30,000 for sentence Monday.

The verdict was returned against the New York bandit in Suffolk Superior Criminal Court. He was declared guilty of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and of armed robbery.

Romano is alleged to be one of three bandits, the others, a man and a woman, who escaped with $18,500 after holding up a paymaster and a clerk at the manufacturing plant offices.

Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan asked that Romano be held without bail, telling Judge Wilford D. Gray that these were two other warrants out for Romano.

Judge Gray pointed out, however, that the $40,000 double surety under which he is now held amounts to $80,000 and should assure that he will be on hand for sentence.

2 Seized in Chase Put on Probation

Henry Maggio, 18, and Leo Martine, 21, of Albany street, South End, caught after a chase in stolen automobile in Egleston square, were tried in Roxbury court today.

They were sentenced to four months in the house of correction. The sentence was suspended for two years.

New York, May 2 (AP)—A pontifical high mass was celebrated in St. Patrick's Cathedral today in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America.

ACCUSE PARKER AS PLOT BRAINS

New York, May 2 (INS)—The man who played a leading role in the efforts of Governor Hoffman of New Jersey to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann from the electric chair, Ellis H. Parker, Sr., famous country sleuth, today was openly accused of being the guiding genius behind the kidnaping and torture of Paul H. Wendel.

The 64-year-old detective was implicated in the Wendel case, District Attorney Geoghan of Brooklyn asserted, by Murray Bleefeld, 23, at his home in Mount Holly, N. J., the elder Parker, whose son, Ellis Parker, Jr., is under indictment as one of Wendel's abductors, predicted his own indictment and arrest as a result of Bleefeld's alleged accusation.

"I certainly expect to be indicted as part of the general plot and frameup," he said. "They framed my boy with a case that is dirty all the way through.

"There's no reason, knowing the type of men behind it here, why they shouldn't come after me."

Bleefeld, arrested in Cincinnati and brought back here, made a complete confession, Geoghan declared, and implicated other New Jersey officials besides Parker.

"Bleefeld's confession will blow the lid off the whole case," Geoghan said.

The Dist. Atty. added that he expected to take Bleefeld before the Grand Jury this afternoon.

OUT OF TOWN CUSTOMERS SEND EXPRESS COLLECT

G-MEN ARREST STAMP RACKET SUSPECT

Working with their customary secretiveness, G-Men today made the first arrest in their drive against an alleged ring of racketeers who have been victimizing banks in Boston by selling restored cancellation stamps.

The racket was first exposed, exclusively, by the Boston Evening American a week ago, when the probe being conducted by the G-men was revealed in all its ramifications.

Special Agent John J. Sheehy, it was learned by this newspaper today, took into custody an Arlington man on charges brought by the Federal investigators.

He was locked up for "safe keeping." Agent Sheehy and other Federal investigators refused to comment on the arrest.

According to the investigators, the gang has been "doctoring" stamps used by banks under Federal laws on legal documents and stocks and bonds.

The stamps, already cancelled, were obtained from old documents, it was said, and after being "laundered" so that the cancellation marks were removed, were sold to the banks.

Woman, 4 Men Held in Dope Raid

Four men and one woman pleaded not guilty today in East Cambridge district court on dope charges. They were all held by Judge Counihan for hearing May 11.

Frank McDonough, 30, of Upton street, Cambridge, was charged with having narcotics and conspiracy to violate the narcotic act. His bail is $5000. Patrick M. Baker, Jr., 42, and Rea Crandall, 44, both of Ashburton place, Cambridge, were held in $1000 each. Edward V. Ryan, 36, of Carver street, Boston, and Bessie Sullivan, of Austin street, Cambridge, were held in $500 each.

Watertown Girl, 3, Run Down by Auto

Eileen Piper, 3, of Walnut street, Watertown, was struck and injured, probably fatally, today by an automobile.

Rushed to Cambridge Hospital, the child was found to be suffering from a probable fracture of the skull, injury to the brain and broken left arm.

Her name was placed on the danger list.

Escaped 'Wild Woman' Caught

North Hampton, N. H., May 2—A "wild woman" roaming the woods in this vicinity, and frightening residents by her knockings on doors and then fleeing, will be returned today to the sanitarium at Wrentham, Mass., from which she escaped several days ago. She was captured when she emerged from the woods.

4 Dead, 16 Hurt In Storm, Flood

Andarko, Okla., May 2 (AP)—Two sections of western Oklahoma counted four dead, 16 injured, and thousands of dollars of property damage today from windstorms and a flood.

'SMILEY'S' SMILE HUNT EASY ON LADIES DAY

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

"HELLO SMILEY," shouted the feminine fans as Ladies' Day brought out hundreds of the fair sex to see Lefty Grove do a commendable job of pitching to defeat Cleveland. Did these ladies smile as the game ended? They smiled just as prettily when Smiley was caught at his job.

These infectious smiles mean that two more dresses will go to the smilers ringed. The dresses are from the Washington street store of I. J. Fox Company. "Smiley" will be on the job again today. Watch for him tomorrow also, and put on your prettiest smile. It may win a dress.

Brunette Ends Blonde Rule of 'Smiley' Rings

By SMILEY
(The Big-Hearted Photographer)

Now today I got to tell you how I went to college and got a couple of girls some nice dresses, but the most important part of it that one out of two—which is practically 50 per cent—does not turn out a blonde, but a brunette.

This breaks the run of blondes, which to me, as a family man up to here in blondes, including Helen, the good-looking in-law, has begun to get monotonous, and now if I can only get a red-head smiling my joy will be unrefined, but I understand it is pretty hard to get red-heads to smile.

Now, I do not mean any persons of this sect I have met personally in the past, say from 1878 on, so if there are any of these I can't mention here, please pay no attention to it.

SNAPS DRESSES

How I happened to go to college was that I was sent out again to get some smiling girls to snap for Stardom dresses at the I. J. Fox Washington street store and I got a ride out around the Fenway, where I saw some girls standing on the steps of Simmons College and smiling at something out in the street.

So I snapped these girls with my camera and then I walked away because I didn't want all college girls on account of I heard somewhere that college girls sometimes are boring, especially after four years, which is the average length of a marriage.

Farther along the Fenway I saw some other girls walking along and giggling gayly and I thought, well, here are some young brides tripping home to get some supper for their breadwinners, and I snapped them.

PICKS HERSELF

And today, Miss Gabrielle Beaulieu of 202 Hildreth street, Lowell, who is one of the girls I snapped on the college steps, comes in and says she is the girl whose head had a circle around it in Thursday's paper, which it was.

A couple of hours after that in walked Miss Gertrude Booth of 354 Washington st., Quincy, who said she is not a blushing bride with a breadwinner but a Simmons College freshman like Miss Beaulieu and her head was ringed in the paper while walking along.

Miss Beaulieu was the brunette, but I would not like to say what Miss Booth is because I have said too much about blondes already.

GET DRESSES

Anyhow these two freshmen both get nice Stardom dresses from I. J. Fox free for smiling and I hope this is a lesson to my wife who rarely smiles and then only on the slightest provocation such as when she rings up a dress which is free to her but very discouraging to me in black and white on the bill.

And now I got to go out again and snap some more smiling girls around town in various places and I will naturally be the fellow with the camera who is doing the snapping.

GERTRUDE BOOTH

GABRIELLE BEAULIEU

Two smiles—two dresses. That's the answeer for some who smile with "Smiley." These two girls caught smiling in the Fenway the other day got two dresses—one each at the I. J. Fox Company's Washington street store. They are Gabrielle Beaulieu, 202 Hildreth street, Lowell, and Gertrude Booth, 354 Washington street, Quincy.

Morgan Prints War Guilt Denial

New York, May 2 (INS)—J. P. Morgan & Company has prepared a general denial of charges that financial and commercial interests forced the United States into the World War on the side of the Allies, it was learned today.

A 120-page memorandum, drawn from testimony given by J. P. Morgan and other members of the firm before the Senate Munitions Committee last winter, sets forth that leading members of the Wilson administration sympathized with the Allies from the start, regardless of trade considerations.

ROB SOUTH END DEAD MAN

Thieves robbed Robert J. Webb, South End master plumber, after he had been fatally stricken, police said today.

The body of the man was found in a Laconia street, South End doorway where he had probably been dragged after the shock.

About $25 was taken from his pockets. Death was caused by a heart attack, according to Medical Examiner William Watters.

Webb's son, Harold, who lives in Shawmut avenue, identified the victim after having reported that he was missing. The dead man had often complained of pains near his heart, the son told police.

NO PWA SHIFT FOR WPA MEN

Andrew H. Peterson, state public works administrator, today said there cannot be any wholesale transfer of men from Works Progress Administration relief rolls to Public Works Administration projects.

In line with WPA announcement that 20,000 men would be dropped between now and June 30, local officials had indicated that the majority of these men would be transferred to PWA projects.

Administrator Peterson disclosed today that the PWA does not employ any men. In explanation he declared:

"All employment of men is carried out by the contractors who have been awarded PWA contracts. They draw about 30 per cent of their men from the National Re-employment Service and the rest from the various labor unions.

"In this way there cannot be any transfer from WPA to PWA. The men losing WPA relief jobs will have to register again with the National Reemployment office in their locality and will, of course, be given preference since they had already been on relief.

"The only people actually hired by the PWA are the office boys. It's all up to the contractors."

The PWA projects, under act of Congress, will not expire until June 30, 1937.

Sikorsky Plane Sets 2 New Marks

Washington, May 2 (AP)—The National Aeronautical Association said today a check had indicated that Boris Sergievsky had broken two international altitude records in a flight April 14 at Stratford, Conn.

A calieration report from the United States Bureau of Standards showed Sergievsky, carrying a payload of 1,102.3 pounds, ascended to 24,951 feet. He flew a Sikorsky S-43 amphibian.

Dog Tired

VOTE ON FARM BILL FORCED

Washington, May 2 (US)—House leaders have given solemn promise they will call up the inflationary $2,000,000,000 Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill for a vote in 10 days, thus paving the way for one of the bitterest legislative battles of the session.

Majority Leader Bankhead, his words echoed by speaker Byrns, told the membership he will "place no obstacles" to a vote on the proposal to refinance farm mortgages with "greenback" currency.

Leaders had succeeded for months in bottling up the measure in the rules committee, but a majority (218) signed the petition discharging the committee and forcing a vote on the floor.

The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, backed by a powerful army of his radio listeners, is an ardent advocate of the bill, and his vigorous speeches against its opponents admittedly had much to do with forcing the vote May 11.

Egypt Electing National House

Cairo, May 2 (AP)—The Egyptian electorate voted for a Chamber of Deputies today, under the recently-restored Constitution, with observers predicting a majority of about 190 for the WAFD (Nationalist) party, opposed to British influence.

DEER ISLE BAN VAIN; FREE 16

In the face of a quarantine at Deer Island, ordered by the health department, prisoners are being released from the House of Correction as fast as their terms expire, it was learned today.

Sixteen are to be set free today and others, at the rate of about eight every day, will be released despite the fact that one death has been recorded there from dread spinal meningitis.

Major George A. F. Mulcahy told the Boston Evening American that there was nothing he could do about it.

He said Attorney-General Paul A. Dever ruled that prisoners whose terms have expired must be released, and he has no choice but to release them.

He declared he would notify the department of health in time for it to keep track of the freed inmates, but beyond that he could not go.

Dr. William R. Keeler, health commissioner, said all his department could do was to give each suspected ex-prisoner a daily check-up.

But that plan wouldn't help much, he added, if the prisoners gave false addresses and could not be found, as is often the case.

The death which brought about the quarantine was that of Arthur Hond, 32, of Dorchester.

The 16 men released today and the four who left yesterday had not had contact with him, officials said.

Sculptor Borglum's Daughter to Wed

San Antonio, Tex., May 2 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Gutzon Borglum today disclosed their daughter, Mary Ellis, and Captain John Mills Sterling, U. S. Army Air Corps, would be married next September.

The wedding will take place in the Black Hills of South Dakota, where Borglum, noted sculptor, now is supervising the carving of heads of Presidents on a granite mountain.

EMPEROR HAILE QUITS ETHIOPIA TO SAVE SELF

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

London, May 2 (INS)—Emperor Hailie Selassie fled from Addis Ababa today as Italian troops neared his capital.

His flight threw European diplomatic circles into confusion.

It bitterly humiliated Britain, exalted Italy, and crushed hopes of all remaining believers in the League of Nations.

But at the same time it opened the prospect of one more breathing space for peace on this continent.

Escape of the Emperor utterly dumbfounded all who had known him and destroyed a great structure of illusions about the heroic resistance of Ethiopia.

Coming atop his declaration of yesterday that Ethiopia would fight to the last man, the Emperor's apparent decision to save his own skin evoked dismay among those who had advocated that Great Britain risk war with Italy to save him.

As a shrewd realist, the Emperor knew when Britain failed to close the Suez Canal that he was doomed. He then tried his own audacious attack in the north and was beaten, and now he has chosen to follow no less an example than Napoleon's after Moscow and again after Waterloo.

At the start of the war he was known to have sums ranging around a half million dollars abroad. His friends believed he had spent nearly all on the war.

U. S. Accepts British Refuge in Addis Ababa

Washington, May 2 (AP)—The state department said today an offer of Great Britain, extending facilities of its stoutly-protected legation at Addis Ababa to all American Nationals in event of trouble in the Ethiopian capital, has been accepted.

The British offer was extended shortly after the outbreak of Italo-Ethiopian hostilities.

Its legation is surrounded by a defense work and is protected by 300 British-Indian troops.

The American legation has no such defense facilities and is located nearer the center of the city.

Available information here is that 100 Americans, mostly missionaries, are in Ethiopia, many of them some distance from the capital.

Haile May Go to Geneva To Appeal to League

Geneva May 2 (AP)—News of the departure for Djibouti of Emperor Hailie Selassie created tremendous interest in League of Nations circles.

Some quarters saw the possibility he might be en route to Geneva to attend the league council meeting May 11.

Somerville Holds N. Y. Fugitive

Charged with being a fugitive from justice, Earl Aldrich, 27, of Chazy, N. Y., pleaded not guilty in Somerville District Court today before Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant and was held in $1000 for hearing May 12. He is wanted in Plattsburg, N. Y. He was arrested yesterday by State Police Sergeants Joseph Donovan and John Horgan on the Cross Street bridge, Somerville. He is alleged to have told the two officers he was wanted in Plattsburg.

Quincy Death Car Driver Sentenced

Peter Brown, 23, of Grossman street, Quincy, was sentenced in Quincy court today to two years in the house of correction on charges of driving under the influence and leaving the scene of an accident. He appealed.

Brown was arrested after his car killed Frank Kendall, 43, of Ellis avenue, Weymouth, on Main street, Quincy, April 11. He was found not guilty on a charge of manslaughter.

Zioncheck Seized Again as Speeder

Shallotte, N. C., May 2 (AP)—Representative Marion Zioncheck's honeymoon trip to Florida was interrupted here today by his second arrest within three days for speeding.

Sheriff J. A. Russ of Brunswick County, who made the arrest, said the Washington congressman was making 70 miles an hour over U. S. highway 17 when he overhauled him two and a half miles south of here.

Both Zioncheck and his bride, the former Rubye Louise Nix, of Texarkana, Ark., who married him this week, were taken to the sheriff's office here.

No formal charges were filed immediately. Mrs. Russ, a deputy sheriff, said the office was communicating with Alexandria, Va., police.

"We understand he is wanted there and may just turn him over to Virginia," she said.

Zioncheck failed to appear in Alexandria yesterday to answer charges of reckless driving and disorderly conduct and forfeited a $200 bond.

A contract for the construction of a modern steel fishing trawler was today signed by the Irving Usen Company, Fish Pier. It will be equipped with a 825-horse power engine and will be built by the Bath, Maine, Iron Works.

ALTERNATE TAX PLAN DRAFTED

Washington, May 2 (INS)—A new tax plan, which would raise $500,000,000 more federal revenue by increasing present rates in the existing tax structure, was being formulated today by Senator King (D.) of Utah, as a substitute for President Roosevelt's revolutionary corporation tax bill.

King would increase present income and corporation taxes, without imposing new taxes. His proposal already has the endorsement of business leaders, who branded the President's new program as destructive, confiscatory, discriminatory and chaotic.

A new host of business leaders are scheduled to appear before the Senate Finance Committee with a continuing attack on the Administration bill. Their vanguard charged the bill, if enacted, would drive small corporations out of business, give greater power to the successful big corporations and bring a "windfall" of business to attorneys and accountants, who would have to interpret it to the average taxpayer.

Bars WPA on Townsend Plan

Paul Edwards, Works Progress administrator for the state, today warned against political campaigns as far as the Townsend Plan is concerned.

"We do not intend, naturally, to suppress people from talking about the Townsend Plan," said Edwards, "yet if Townsend Plan supporters campaign for any political party, Works Progress Administration employes must refrain from participation or support of any candidate."

N. Y.-Boston Ships Delayed by Fog

Despite a mid-summer day in Boston, a heavy fog was reported today off Nantucket shoals and Highland Light on Cape Cod causing late arrival of ships from New York to Boston.

Reports from Nantucket Lightship indicated a visibility of only a few feet. From Highland Light the visibility was reported at 200 yards.

Officials of the Cunard line in Boston reported they had received word that the liner Carinthia, which left New York for Boston last night, was groping its way through the fog. The Carinthia, due in Boston this afternoon, is not expected to arrive until midnight.

The ship, due here to pick up passengers before it leaves for Europe, will sail at 11 tomorrow morning. Passengers have been notified to embark at 8 a. m.

Officials of the Eastern Steamship Company today announced that there will be no delay in the sailing of their New York-bound boat this afternoon.

STRANGELY REALIZES AMBITION

Unwitting Move In Bank Robbery Gives Clerk Chance to Make Good

By CHARLES MEDEIROS, 56 Mt. Vernon st., Charlestown

Jim Howard was a clerk in a large bank. He wasn't a talkative man, made few friends and lived alone.

He never had the nerve, or courage, to ask for a raise.

He had one ambition, and only one ambition. That was to save the bank from being robbed at the risk of his own life.

Almost daily he would read of a new and daring bank robbery having been committed near and about his town, but never in Jim's bank.

HEARD VOICE

Suddenly he heard a rough, menacing voice commanding him to step.

Then they marched in, four men, each one tougher than the other.

They commanded Jim and the others in the bank to put their "hands up!"

Jim felt that this was his chance. He knew that it was his chance to jump out of his obscurity and into life.

But he hesitated.

He was afraid.

Yes, that was it. He was afraid of death.

Jim felt his heart pounding.

His brain kept asking, "Now what should I do?"

He wanted to live, oh, so very much. He also wanted to do more than just live.

But even life as it was, Jim decided, was better than no life at all.

And he let the four men rob the bank.

CHEERFUL SURPRISE

Jim thought that he was going to be fired because he had willingly backed up out of the way of the robbers.

But instead the boss greeted Jim in a very cordial and gay manner, and asked him to smoke one of his cigars, a favor which he did not extend to everyone.

"Come, come," said the boss. "Don't sit so meekly. You're the hero of the town. The whole town is wild about the way you backed up so nonchalantly and stepped on the burglar alarm while the bandits threatened you with their guns. Now, now, son, don't attempt to deny it. That would be false modesty. Miss Mathilda saw the whole thing and to show my appreciation you will get a promotion and raise in pay."

Joe McCarthy of the Ruth-less Yankees is reported to be the highest paid manager in baseball. He receives an estimated annual salary of $35,000.

Boston's outfit of swat, Jimmie Foxx, batted in nine runs against Cleveland on Aug. 14, 1933, for a new league record. Jim Bottomley, now of the Browns, holds the Major League record with twelve which he accomplished in 1925 while with the Cardinals.

George Turbeville, young hurler of the Athletics, has a town named after him.

Carl Hubbell, the Giants southpaw ace, has had his share of feats. He twirled a no-hit, no-run game in 1929. In 1933 he hurled an 18 inning game against the Giants, allowing only six hits, fanned 12 and did not pass a man to gain a 1-0 victory. In 1933 also he pitched 46 consecutive scoreless innings, had an earned run average of 1.15, the lowest since 1906 and was voted the league's most valuable player.

The sophisticated belle of nineteen who solemnly declares that she will be seen in public in no court who measures less than six feet for possibly five-foot eleven if he is especially good looking) is invariably the contented bride of a little fellow not quite five-foot four who, she is assured, worships her, and whose gaze, she is equally assured, will not wander.

BOOK REVIEW

"If I Have Four Apples," by Josephine Lawrence, is a much-needed novel, simple in plot and structure.

It delves deeply into the daily life of its chief character, Penter Hoe, and his impoverished family, who, try as they may, cannot seem to balance the well-known budget.

Mrs. Bradley, head of the financial department of a newspaper, to whom his wife, Rose, writes requesting a budget plan, endeavors, though unsuccessfully, to aid them.

She suggests, sagaciously enough, that Penter sell his house and rent an apartment somewhere.

Penter, however, feels that he would not be living right were he to do so.

His daughter, Sythia, conceives the false idea that she is or is going to be, a great dancer, for which vocation it is clearly shown she is hardly fit.

A son, Dallas, gives genesis to the fabulous idea that he'll become a great lawyer or an equally great doctor.

But, as far as any honest effort is concerned, he'll have none of it.

Penter's invincible, unreasonable obstinacy is manifested throughout the entire book.

He never gets anywhere because he is deficient in both prudence and common sense.

BOULDER LEGEND RETOLD

Lottery Prize Helps Local Citizen to Make Investments

Hopkinton, N. H., May 2.

There is legend even about a rock.

On the Timothy Burns estate, there stands the Timothy Burns boulder, 10 feet high and from 15 to 20 feet in diameter.

A small pavilion and steps lead up to it and, in the warm months, it is entirely enclosed by the thick foliage of the surrounding trees.

It makes a pleasant retreat where, those, historically minded, may turn back the pages of this town's history to dwell on the legend associated with the rock, itself.

BOUGHT TICKET

In 1816, there lived two men in the village of Hopkinton—friends, they were, who called themselves Philips and Brown.

One day Philips purchased a ticket in a lottery, costing him $8.00.

Before the date of the drawing, Philips began to fear that he would lose his $8.00 and offered to sell it to Brown for $4.00.

Brown bought it, but he, in turn, tried unsuccessfully to sell it for a small load of hay.

Soon after the drawing, Philips received notice that the nuypher credited to him had drawn a prize of $25,000.00.

PAID PHILIPS

Philips was paid a sum to make the papers over to Brown, who in due time received the money.

Brown began to make investments in real estate, buying a saw-mill, also the house, known as the Fletcher place, where Grace Fletcher lived, she, it was, who became the wife of Noah Webster.

Then Brown built the Boulder Farm house, which has been occupied by many prominent families of the state, among them a former Governor of New Hampshire.

So, even a rock can tell a story—the story of its being and its association.

All the radiant charm

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Women Should Not Harbor Morbid Fancies Against Their Mates

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Theories concerning jealousy seem to shift every decade. The latest one, handed out by eminant specialists on mental diseases, is that it's a form of insanity—hallucination accompanied by delusions.

Why will women wreck their homes by indulgence in such morbid fancies as revealed in this man's letter?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

During the few years I have been married my life has been one of a succession of humiliating scenes. Soon after marriage I found out that my life was not my own. If I talked to a neighbor (feminine) I was immediately accused of the basest of motives.

If I spoke to anyone with whom my wife was not acquainted (man or woman) I had to explain how, why, when and where I met that person.

Soon we lost all our friends and as you imagine I lost all the love I had for my wife. The continual nagging and accusations, without an ounce of foundation, soon left me with nothing but contempt for her. Thus after nine years we parted.

Now she is begging me to come back to her, and says these insane outbreaks were only because she loved me so dearly. I think that's a poor way of showing love, don't you?

Is it my duty to give up my life and the little happiness I might find in peace, or should I go back to this unbearable way of living?

WORRIED.

MY DEAR FRIEND:

In such a tragic letter as this there is only one side of the question. Personally, I feel this man has done all in his power to make a go of marriage, and failed.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My girl friend and I are in a troubled state of mind.

I met this girl about four months ago and since then I have discovered that she lives up to my ideal. Our opinions on many subjects are the same, both of us are frank and truthful, we are happy in each other's presence, and both of us seem to enjoy the beauties of nature, above all other things. We could enjoy spending a nickel just as much as spending $20, and we are not hard to please.

Recently she has made a confession which shocked me. Now I'm beginning to imagine all sorts of things about her. When she was sixteen years of age (she's twenty-one now) she fell in love with a man and made a terrible mistake. No one knows of her mistake. Should I forgive her for her blunder, or should I break up with her? Do you think that we could be happy together with this mark against her? Should a person marry such a woman when he knows the secret?

WORRIED.

DEAR FRIEND:

You should realize that the young lady you mention is honorable. She did not have to tell you of her past. You should by this time know her well enough to decide what her conduct will be in the future. I believe that a girl with enough honor to reveal the story of her misfortune would never have revealed her story.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 20 and I want to be married in June. My problem is that my father is dead and there are ten children in our family. My relief job is our only support.

But, Miss Fairfax, don't you think I have a right to my only happiness?

MARY.

DEAR LITTLE MARY:

Of course, you have a right to all the happiness in the world. You should marry the boy you love—but not just now.

You see your present happiness lies in earning money to feed your poor mother and little brothers and sisters. You must think of them.

So, dear girl, put off your marriage for one year. Help your family. Then pass the burden along to one of the others.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

May I offer a few of the finest qualities for a husband to possess, for the June bride.

First—The quality of looking on life with quiet eye.

Second—The quality of loving a home and children.

Third—The quality of respecting the frailities and perfections of others, especially in his wife and children.

Fourth—The qualities of patience . . . forgiveness . . . common-sense . . . tactfulness . . . politeness . . . intelligence . . . health . . . sportsmanship . . . self-control . . . refinement . . . consideration . . . kindness . . . character . . . affection . . . firmness . . . confidence . . . joyfulness . . . appreciativeness . . . humor . . . and the grand quality of firmness of moral will.

Last, but not least in importance—do not look for a superman for a husband. Rather look for a man as full of faults as you are, so that he will be able to overlook all your shortcomings with a heart and mind that understands that no human person is perfect to the hundredth degree of perfection.

Perfect Defense

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Perfect defense sometimes hinges on the closest partnership cooperation, other times on nothing more than vivid imagination employed by one of the partners.

This latter type of defense was splendidly exemplified in a hand played in the recent Grand National Tournament, conducted by the United States Bridge Association.

North, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	2 ♣
3 ♠ (1)	5 ♣	Pass	Pass
4 ♡	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

(1) Usually, a six-card major suit should be rebid before a four-card suit is shown. But North wishes to explore spade possibilities at a safe early stage, the fact that he has "reversed suits" (shows hearts before the higher ranking spade suit) must convey a picture of strength to partner, and may induce a spade raise on something like Jxxx.

North's bidding was very aggressive, considering that his partner failed to keep the one heart bid open. But it took splendid defense on the part of East to defeat him.

The Ace of clubs was opened, followed by a second round which declarer ruffed. The King of trumps went to West's Ace and another club was led and ruffed. Now, while there was still a trump in dummy to protect declarer from another force in clubs, the King of spades was laid down. Had East won this with the Ace, the defenders could have thrown their cards in the wastebasket. West's spade Jack would drop on the Queen and dummy's ten would be the entry to the diamond suit. East was too alert—he held up his Ace. Declarer was now helpless to avoid the loss of two spade tricks. He drew the adverse trumps, but even though he followed with the spade Queen, felling West's Jack, East, by again holding up the Ace, preserved his A9 for two inescapable tricks.

Understanding People

TWO such different personalities, yet she likes them both, and finds it hard to choose between. That is Marjorie's problem.

Smiling Barry is lively, fun-loving, rather changeable, and inclined to go to extremes, but seldom depressed or downed by hard knocks.

He likes a crowd, action, new places, parties. He is not often found sitting alone, thinking or reading. Psychologists call him an extravert, likely to get on well in life, but in some danger of being shallow.

Paul is a different sort, quieter, reserved and always having a struggle with shyness. He likes a few close friends, enjoys reading. His real life is inner, emotional. He's a bit melancholy. An introvert, psychologists says.

Let psychology give you the sound, scientific answer to your life problems.

Dress Up to Your Sport---Says Fashion Congress

GOLFER'S DELIGHT—so the Fashion Congress dubbed this smartly simple crepe frock, with a flannel topper and beret adding the final touch. But you'll wear it and love it though you've never waggled a club over a little white pill, and never expect to! On the concealed closing, which runs from chin to hem, are embroidered various sports motifs . . . racquets, golf clubs, wheels, sails, scotties. Your stride or your stance will govern the number of buttons you leave open at the hem. Heavenly blue is the frock shown, though it's to be had in maize, flesh or white.

At the right is shown the May Wine flannel topper, a copy of a Claire Soeurs coat with much chic in its details, and May Wine felt beret which accompanied the blue sports frock, making an exquisite color combination. Lovely colors are used in these toppers—grey, violet, chaudron. The beret is an adaptable little thing, and may be worn dozens of different ways. Altogether, the ensemble is very much within budget limits—under twenty dollars for the frock, around eight for the flannel topper, and around three for the felt beret.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

FOLLOW DIETER'S GOLDEN RULE

By IDA JEAN KAIN

RECKLESS reducing will add years to your face. You see so many fashionable women who have protected their figures at the expense of their faces! If you keep your weight down through calorie restriction alone, your face is bound to bear the brunt of the calorie wear and tear.

To slim down gracefully, follow the reducer's golden rule: Reduce gradually, exercise consistently, and do not attempt to reduce too fast.

Weight must be removed slowly to protect your skin as well as your health, for weight loss must keep pace with skin contraction. The rate of speed at which the skin contracts is conditioned by weight and age as well as skin tonicity.

Overweight

You realize, of course, that the greater the amount of overweight the longer the time required to lose it. But what you may not appreciate is that with increased weight there is a corresponding decrease in the skin's elasticity. The greater the amount of overweight, the more slowly the fat must be removed.

For example, with fifty pounds of overweight, the skin has been excessively stretched. You should extend your reducing program over a year, and the results will be more pleasing and more likely to be permanent if you take eighteen months.

You cannot keep young without exercise. You can keep your weight down by cutting calories to the minimum, but your face and throat will be haggard. You will look unhappy. Steal a glance at the women who use this method of keeping slim and see if this is not true!

Care in Reducing

Planned exercises will keep your figure and your vitality at their best. You know from your own experience that the figure-controlling muscles are those of the hip, thigh and derriere. With sedentary living, in order to keep slim at these points without exercise you must eat your calories so dangerously low that you draw on the stored calories elsewhere . . . obviously from the face and throat.

GRADUAL LOSS OF WEIGHT BEST

Keep fit and young through exercise. A daily walk and 15 minutes of planned daily exercise will safeguard your face and your figure.

Now about how far to reduce: Those of you who are extremely overweight should consult your doctor as to the amount to lose. When your weight has been considerably above normal for years, it is sometimes unwise to attempt a return to normal. It is possible that you should lose only a percentage of your overweight. Your physical condition sets the limit on reducing. Keep in mind that you are after health and a good figure, not just slimness.

There is still another drawback to too rapid reducing, in that the faster you lose the faster you will gain it all back. With a gradual loss, your weight is stabilized.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 6S8

AS Dr. Braithwaite took his fingers from Lee Chow's pulse, the emaciated Chinese nodded an assent to the surgeon's verdict of "a most remarkable rally."

"I shall live to restore this," he said. "Look! all of you!"

He held the jade ornament up to us, and, with the others, I saw that it was a museum piece. I never had dreamed of anything so beautiful, or having such wonderful workmanship and carving. It was a bead-dress, something like a crown, and topped with four balls.

"There is nothing so beautiful in all the world," he said, then he turned his eyes upon Hugh Grantland.

"For centuries my ancestors had charge of this and the shrine it graced," Lee Chow went on. "They defended it from our deadly enemies who have tried to gain possession of it. When it was stolen during the time of the Boxer rebellion, I was held responsible by my family. I fled for my life and my honor.

"I have been a wanderer and an exile ever since, not devoid of certain power, or means, but never able to go back to my rightful place. Now I can lay my bones with those of my ancestors."

"Here, Miss Marion," he said smiling faintly, "these are my ransom for this which I must take from you."

"Oh! no!" Marion protested, but her words were drowned in the excitement of hearing an imperative knock upon the door. My father opened, and a state trooper spoke quickly.

"Car coming back, sir," he said. "Stopped at the tree."

"Every man out of here, except Ronald, Bob, Noel, Dr. Braithwaite and Lee Chow's servant," my father said. "Lillian, keep this door open. We may want you to come out."

The next few minutes were like an agonized nightmare. From outside the house there was the rattle of machine guns; from inside, the sound of answering shots; then a silence that betokened a parley, and then Samuel Brixton's voice hoarse with agony.

"I tell you it's me they want. Let me go!"

"Not this time," Harry Underwood's voice boomed in answer. "I don't know what you deserve, but we're not sending anybody out to those devils until we have to."

"Sam!" Helena Brixton shrieked, and leaping to the door, tore it open and dashed through it. Lillian rushed after her, throwing a direction back at me.

There is a tiny window high up in the kitchen, the reason for which no one has ever discovered. But Jim had raised it enough to thrust a rifle barrel through it.

"No! No!" Samuel Brixton shrieked. "It's Charlie, my brother!" but the rifle spoke once, twice and an instant later there was a detonation that seemed to rock the house, and then the sound of a starting car.

Martha Lee's MAPLE Syrup RECIPES

By MARTHA LEE

THESE are the days for bringing forth all the maple-flavored recipes of your acquaintance for the maple syrup season is on!

We all know the joys of the new crop—syrup on pancakes, waffles and cornbread. But these are only the beginning of the delicious ways of using maple syrup.

A maple mousse, easily made and frozen in the automatic refrigerator, is a favorite dessert. Freeze it in those small individual paper cups and spread it with chopped nuts for a different party dessert.

For serving as an ice cream sauce, cook the syrup until it is as heavy as thin cream (224 Deg. F.). Substitute maple syrup for the sugar and water in boiled frosting.

MAPLE MOUSSE

1½ cups maple syrup
3 egg whites
1 tall can evaporated milk
¼ tsp. vanilla

Boil maple syrup to a thread. There should be 1¼ cups syrup after boiling. Pour syrup slowly over stiffly beaten egg whites. Beat until it holds its shape. Chill thoroughly and fold into the stiffly whipped evaporated milk. Add vanilla and turn into cold freezing tray or paper cups to freeze.

MAPLE CREAM SAUCE

1½ cups maple sugar
½ cup cream
2 tsps. vanilla
1 tbsp. butter

MAPLE BAVARIAN CREAM
(4 to 5 servings)

2 tsps. gelatine
¼ cup cold water
2-3 cup cooked rice
½ cup milk
3 tbsps. brown sugar.
1 tsp. vanilla
1-3 cup heavy cream

Put the gelatine in the top of a double boiler; pour in ¼ cup cold water; let stand at room temperature for 5 to 10 minutes; add the sugar, rice and milk; heat until the gelatine and sugar have dissolved. Fold in the vanilla and whipped cream after the mixture has been cooled and is the consistency of an unbeaten egg white. Serve with additional whipped cream, with sliced peaches or sweetened berries, or with maple syrup and toasted nuts.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Opening of "Junior Birdmen Week," proclaimed by Governor James M. Curley in commemoration of the organization's second birthday anniversary, will be featured tomorrow by the inclusion of a special full page for Junior Birdmen in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

This page will contain aviation news of interest to every boy and girl as well as adults. It will consist of birthday greetings from famous pilots and the most prominent persons in American aeronautics; all indoor and outdoor national model plane records; the new Junior Birdmen pledge and other fascinating features.

If you are a boy or girl 10 to 21 years old and interested in aviation don't fail to read the special Junior Birdmen page in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser.

"Junior Birdmen Week" will also mark the opening of outdoor model competitions for members of the Boston wing. Applications are now being received for the 1936 wing outdoor air races on Saturday, June 27, and the annual Novice contest on Saturday, May 23.

The air races will consist of three events, one for gliders, one for stick models and one for R. O. G. models. The high point winner will receive the wing trophy and the right to participate in the national tournament to be held in Boston in August.

The Novice contest will consist of glider and stick model events and the high point winner will receive a $5 merchandise order good at the Boys' or Under-Grad Shop of Kennedy's store. Runners-up will receive merchandise orders ranging from $1 to $5 good at the Best Model Supply Co., 31 Bedford street, Boston.

The gliders and stick models in the Novice contest will be eligible for the wing air races. To learn the specifications for models simply write to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, for a manual of the 1936 outdoor air races. Enclose a three-cent stamp with the request.

The Comets' squadron will hold a contest at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Harvard Stadium. Sponsor Gaylon Townsend announces. For R. O. G. models of five-feet wing span. A chemical gas motor and a set of gouges will be first and second prizes with a third to be selected.

An ice cream cone party will be given for Comets whose models try to beat a veteran plane built by Mrs. Townsend and which has made several outstanding flights.

BETTY ALDEN

Elizabeth Hobbs, Alice Farnsworth, Mary Loder Join May Brides

By BETTY ALDEN

TIMES HAVE certainly changed . . . there used to be an old saying that brides who "marry in May regret the day," but now it is getting to be that May closely rivals June as a month of brides . . . Already, on this first Saturday of the month, we have three important society weddings taking place in town and in Brookline . . .

Mrs. John Andresen

At 3:30 this afternoon Elizabeth Hobbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Hobbs, changed her name to Mrs. Robert Warren Walker at a simple wedding ceremony in the chapel of the Arlington street church . . . Rev. Danna McLean Greeley officiated, and though only the immediate families and a few friends had been invited to the ceremony, a larger group of friends extended their best wishes to the newly-weds at the reception which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Weld Richardson . . .

The bride carried a lacy bouquet of white iris and babies' breath with her white lace gown and traditional tulle veil . . . Her sister, Mrs. Walter Webling, Jr. (Nancy Hobbs Allison wore a fluffy gown of brown net over satin with a brown horsehair picture hat for her role as matron of honor and only attendant . . .

Mrs. Hobbs had chosen a gown of green crepe with brown accessories and the bridegroom's step-mother, Mrs. Guy Warren Walker, the former Baroness Virginia Podmaniczky, who is an extremely attractive person, wore black trimmed with shell pink . . .

Richard Harding Bigelow of Crane and Kettle Inn, Framlingham, was the best man and the ushers were brothers of the couple, Samuel Walker and Samuel L. Hobbs . . .

The bridal couple will be at home after June 1 at Goodwin place, Boston, where all their Vincent Club, Junior League, Harvard and Union Boat Club fellow members will be able to call on them . . .

Andresen-Farnsworth Ceremony

THE RECORDING SECRETARY of the Junior League and Vincent Club will have to make another change in the membership rolls after today, for Alice Farnsworth became the bride of John E. Andresen in the Leyden Church in Brookline at a late afternoon ceremony today . . .

Aquamarine and dusty pink was the color scheme for the bevy of girls who precede the satin-clad bride to the altar . . . The maid of honor, Peggy Farnsworth, had a dusty pink crepe frock with a brown picture hat and an arm bouquet of spring flowers, and the bridesmaids were similarly gowned in aquamarine crepe with brown accessories . . . They were the Misses Ruth and Barbara Coffin and Ann Petersen, daughter of the Rev. Abbott Petersen, who performed the ceremony . . . The attendants' dresses were made with little full-sleeved jackets and accordion pleated bands around the neckline and wrists . . .

Robert Sweeney came over from New York to serve as best man, and the ushers were the Messrs. Sidney Cole, Robert Graham of New York, Frank L. Young, 2d, of Boston, Worth Senner of Albany, Thomas Jamieson of Scranton and Jermyn Rollo of Albany . . .

After their wedding trip Mr. Andresen and his bride will reside in Boston . . . The bridegroom was graduated from the Choate School and attend Wesleyan University and Franklin and Marshall College . . . He is associated in business in Boston . . .

Mary Loder Weds in Brookline Church

MISTY BLUE CHIFFON dresses with large leghorn picture hats and armfuls of pastel spring flowers, fashioned the picturesque outfits of the two bridal attendants at the wedding this afternoon of Mary Loder to Louville French Niles in the Leyden Church in Brookline . . . Only the families of the bridal couple attended the ceremony, but a large reception followed immediately at The Country Club . . . The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Halsey B. Loder of Brookline . . . She wore her grandmother's lace wedding veil with a princess style gown, and her bouquet was of freesia, lillies of the valley and gardenias . . .

Harold L. Niles, the bridegroom's father, served as best man. Mrs. William B. Elwell, Jr., and Miss Katharine Niles, sisters of the bridal couple, were the only attendants . . .

After June first, Mr. Niles and his bride will live at Great Bridge, Kingston, Mass. . . . Besides being a member of both the Junior League and Vincent Club, the bride is also a graduate of Vassar in 1935 and attended the May School . . . Mr. Niles attended Dartmouth and is a member of the University Club . . .

Last evening, the entire bridal party had a pre-wedding celebration at a large dinner dance given by Katharine Niles at her home in Wellesley Farms . . .

A few impressions of the season's last Friday afternoon Symphony . . . Mrs. Ronald Lyman in a black taffeta creation, made with a circular skirt and funny domino-like squares of silver cloth on one hip and across the back of her gown . . . Eleanor Gibson looking very composed for a bride-to-be, in demure navy blue with white . . . Mrs. Boylston Beale in a dark blue suit with red trimmings . . . Mrs. Wallace Goodrich in green . . . Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer arriving in her motor from Myopia . . . S. R. O. and the great ovations for Dr. Koussevitzky at both the beginning and end of the concert. . .

VOLUNTEER Dispensary Worker to Aid Pops Benefit

(Picture from Binational News Photograph Service)

ELIZABETH TIMMINS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Timmins of Groton, will be one of the flower vendors at the Mardi Gras in Old New Orleans Pops Concert, to benefit the Boston Dispensary and Floating Hospital, where she spends many industrious hours as a volunteer worker.

CAPPING a week of festivities, Regis College juniors promenaded last evening in Regis Hall on the college grounds in Boston.

Grace Gal, chairman of the prom committee, and Helen Ryan, class president, shared the evening's honors. Grace wore an effective gown of gleaming white satin and Helen was escorted by Henry Lee.

Glimpsed Jean Hagan in a ruffled frock of white chiffon and Mary Boyle who wore smartly cut gown of printed taffeta. Tom McGuane came from Detroit to accompany Alice Torphy who was quite distinctive in her black crepe gown topped with cape lined with pale gold satin . . . most striking with her titian hair.

Glimpsed Miriam Cunningham in chartreuse chiffon, Anne Gallagher, whose green taffeta gown was topped with blue sheer and Felecine O'Keefe in a dainty frock of apricot chiffon.

Other juniors enjoying their night of nights were Marguerite Chartier and Mae Walsh, both in picturesque frock of rustling taffeta and Rita McAdia wearing orchid chiffon.

350 Club to Hold Reception

Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Jr., first lady of the Commonwealth, and honorary president of the 350 Club, will be co-hostess with other club officers at a tea and reception tomorrow afternoon at the Hotel Sheraton, Bay State road, to club members and friends. Assisting in receiving will be Mrs. Edward F. Goode, president, Miss Dorothy Mullin, vice-president, Miss Kathryn Glynn, secretary and Miss Agnes M. Goode, treasurer. Serving as pourers will be Mrs. Daniel J. Holland, Mrs. Frank J. Long and Miss Margaret Donovan.

Mrs. Edward C. MacCourt, Chairman of the 350 Club "Night at the Pops," will be present with her committee to assist members in making final plans and reservations for the concert. A large number have already made reservations including Governor James M. Curley and his military staff.

Emmanuel League's annual May Party, the last of the season at the college, will take place on Saturday afternoon, May 23, at 2:30. Mrs. John A Minahan is in charge of the entertainment.

Ushers

Marjorie Saltonstall and Betsy Jaques will be in the corps of ushers at the first Boston showing of "The Four Neighbors," the movie illustrating the work of the Judge Baker Guidance Center, which will be held at the Fine Arts Theater on the evening of Wednesday, May 13.

Nervous Habits Need Attention

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

MANY a mother is unnecessarily alarmed about muscular twitchings or nervous movements of a child. These jerkings are medically known as "habit tics."

In most instances they can be prevented if medical attention is obtained, particularly at the onset of the disturbance.

For years there has been an erroneous belief that many of these nervous twitches are due to some impairment of the brain. In reality, the disorder can be traced to some disturbance of the nervous system, or a reflex from some physical disability.

Habit tics are frequently observed in children between the ages of 6 and 12 years. No doubt you have seen these same purposeless movements in adults.

In most instances the facial muscles are involved and the victim unconsciously winks an eye, or draws the mouth to one side. As a rule this habit is developed in early childhood and unless corrective measures are taken it may persist through adult life.

IT IS CURABLE

It is important to bear in mind that such nervous spasms must not be confused with the spasms that accompany certain constitutional diseases. For example, a child who is afflicted with St. Vitus dance is a victim of muscular spasms.

These spasms differ from habit tics in that they are uncontrollable and rarely follow a definite habit pattern. That is, it may attack a leg at one time and the next time it may be in the face or neck. It is not always a movement of the same sort.

I venture to say that a goodly number of persons believe habit tic to be incurable. They point to some other member of the family who has the same habit and therefore conclude it must be hereditary and an incurable affliction. This is not so.

The victim of a habit tic requires training and teaching of self-control. Of course, every source of irritation must be removed. It may be necessary to consult with a psychiatrist, to make sure the child is not obsessed with some fear or has some form of mental abnormality.

Every effort should be made to improve the general health. The child should be given an abundance of fresh air and sunshine. The diet should be varied and well-balanced, containing an abundance of fresh fruits, vegetables, milk, cereal, cream, butter and eggs. During the winter months or long continued cloudy weather, it is advisable to give cod liver oil to the child.

Adequate hours of rest and play are essential. The meals should be served at regular hours. There should be no distracting and exciting play during meal time and during the periods of relaxation. The very young child should be encouraged to take a daily afternoon nap.

I cannot overstate the importance of medical attention for the child who shows any tendency toward excessive nervousness.

Luxury Model

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 36

Until she definitely knew it came from "Handsome," she couldn't possibly return it to him.

Get out of her smart black luncheon gown, and into her kimono, for the afternoon customers would arrive shortly.

Luana slipped the brooch back in its box, and the box into her handbag just before Yvonne Dantrey walked into the dressing-room.

"You got your package? It came 10, 15 minutes ago. I signed for it."

Yvonne's bright eyes were feverish-like. As though she would pry every secret of her soul from her she fixed them steadily on Luana, whom, in view of last night's discovery, she now considered a "verree dark horse".

"You signed for it?" Who brought it?" Luana contrived to sound casual as she slipped her black gown over her head. She was glad to hide her tell-tale face from the French girl. "A telegraph boy?" she suggested.

"Someone in uniform. I did not notice," fibbed the other, though she had distinctly seen the company name on his cap. She had had the foresight to pretend to be Luana, and now she was annoyed that she had not kept the package, for she had been quite alone in the salon when the messenger had given it into her keeping, and perhaps no one would have been the wiser and she the richer?

Still, the risk was too great.

"Was it a gift, Luana? Are you not going to show it to me?" wheedled Yvonne, looking slightly aggrieved.

She was saying to herself, "If she does not tell me, I go round to the telegraph office and bribe the boy to say who sent it?" She had something already on Luana, and it would be illuminating to get more . . .

Luana put her black dress on a hanger and took her kimono from its peg. She slipped it on, then held her wrist out to her inquisitor.

It was only the metal bracelet of that gown I wore to the St. Regal opening," she said nonchalantly, "I left it in the wash-room of a restaurant a day or two ago, and this morning I phoned them to send it over, only it arrived too late, as you see."

Yvonne Knew

"Eet that so?" said Yvonne, ponderously eyeing the oxidised bit of costume jewelry. "I could have sworn I saw it on your wrist when you went to the St. Regal this morning."

Luana smiled carelessly. "You're seeing things, my dear. Too much wine last night, or too much Armand? Which was it?"

The sallow face flushed ominously. How dare she mention Armand in that fashion!

Had her ears deceived her last night in the apartment, when through the open door of her bedroom she heard Armand in the living-room whisper something to Luana about meeting him tonight for dinner?

"Where do you go this evening, Luana?" she asked sharply.

"You dine where?"

"We haven't decided yet."

That meant she was going to sneak out for a rendezvous with Armand!

The "verree dark horse" was trying to put something farther over on her . . . Well, she would follow, and if she found them together, she would make a grand scene. She would denounce Luana as the impostor that she was!

Luana disarmed her by asking, "What's the address of that cute little French restaurant on South Central Park?"

"You go there with your Jimmee, Luana?"

"I'd like to. They've grand spaghetti, and it's fine to sit out of doors and look over the Park and the Japanese lanterns as you eat."

Yvonne gave her the number of the building, and suspicion was temporarily allayed.

"You got the letter I left for you on the mantelpiece this morning? It came last night. Armand and I—we found it under the door when he left."

She might have added that she had steamed the flap of the envelope open and read its contents, and then replaced the missive, and gummed the flap down. That had been after she had unlocked Luana's suitcase with the key she had found in the cupboard in the bathroom.

A "Detective"

And the news she had found in the letter in the suitcase had been 20 times as interesting as Jimmy's scribbled message. It was all Yvonne could do now to refrain from addressing her as Elizabeth! How would she take that?

"Ma foi! Nom du nom, that would knock her for a loop!" she said to herself.

"What's to be back to them?" she ventured, teasing him. "How you do hate people to stare at me, Jimmy! I believe you've got lots of the Oriental in you. You'd put me in a one-woman harem?"

He only laughed. Often they laughed. When one is young and very much in love, laughter comes readily.

"I wish the confounded fool wouldn't drive so fast. If there, chauffeur, take it easy! This isn't the Kentucky Derby!" sang out Jimmy through the half-open partition.

"Ain't you bold? He knows we're making love. He'll expect us to ask him to drive us round and round the park—"

"We'll go there later, Luana. It's beautiful under the trees with the almond blossom on them. We'll go and sit there after we've had our dinner."

Perfumes Now to Match Print of Gown, Scarf

By DONNA GRACE

WHENEVER it is possible, you should add a touch of harmony to your every plans—one that may not strictly belong to the actual paraphernalia of cosmetics and beauty aids.

There are some cosmetics that give us almost the same kind of thrill and exhilaration we experience when we are wearing a new hat or gown. Perfume, of course, is one of these. It affects the senses and moods as no other beauty aids ever does, and there are perfumes for every mood, as you know.

No girl should think it an extravagance to have several different perfumes in her cabinet. How can she use the same perfume that goes with her tweeds or daytime attire when she wears dainty evening gowns? The street costume calls for a fresh woodsie or metallic aroma, while the evening costume scents carry out a certain theme of their own, depending on the style of materials.

The gold and silver or elaborate gown of rich material needs an atmosphere that the exotic and heavy blended Oriental perfumes create, but an one would associate a strong, pungent aroma with the crisp organdies or dainty mailine. The festive spring bouquet is the aroma they call for.

One of the smart fads for spring is to match your perfume with the silk floral prints. For instance, if you are wearing a smart black silk with violet design you will use violet perfume and wear a bunch of violets. They are fashionable again, you know.

When wearing plain gowns or suits you can select a flowered print scarf, or some accessory, then match the flower with a perfume. This is the time to wear a flower scent—not a bouquet mixture.

What a lovely combination would be scarfs or bags in orange blossoms and orange blossom perfume to harmonize. There is a whole field of flowers to inspire you, so enjoy yourself by finding the one that suits you best.

Would you like to include my perfume chart and the correct use of perfume in your spring list of accessories? There is no charge for it. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Death in the Air!

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Today's featured guest in this thrill corner of ours is Marcus Thrasher Monk of Springfield boulevard, Queens Village, L. I. Mark gets his name on the club roster and wins the daily ten-spot with an aviation story that is as exciting as it is unusual.

You know aviators, particularly in war time, often have animal mascots that they take up in the air with them. The mascot might be a pet kitten, a dog or even a monkey and after a while the flier begins to think that his mascot brings him luck and wouldn't think of flying without his live good-luck piece. With the big planes we are getting nowadays I wouldn't be surprised if some pilot adopted an elephant as a mascot, but I haven't heard about one yet. Have you?

FLOYD GIBBONS.

The Lafayette Escadrille, that gallant band of young Americans who flew for France before we came into the World War, had a couple of lion cubs named "Whiskey" and "Soda" as mascots. Captain Bill Thaw brought them out to the hangar when they were about as big as Pekinese puppies and the lions were great pals—until they started to grow up.

The cubs were perfectly tame and used to run around like a couple of dogs. But soon French mess sergeants in that sector began to miss chickens and rabbits from their supplies. The nightly disappearance of the meat was a great mystery until one morning the thieves were caught in the act. The prowlers were none other than "Whiskey" and "Soda," and when a French soldier tried to take their prey away from them the lions chased him almost all the way into Germany!

That was the end of "Whiskey" and "Soda." The cubs, now as big as police dogs, were banished from the front and sentenced to life imprisonment in the Paris Zoo.

A year later I visited "Whiskey" and "Soda" with their old owner, Bill Thaw. The lions were now full grown, but they hadn't forgotten their old friend. Bill, to my horror and to the horror of the spectators and guards, walked right up to the cage and, putting his hand through the bars, began to pet them. And the lions to the amazement of everybody rolled over on their backs and purred like big kittens!

Bill had tears in his eyes when we left and the two big cats stood on their hind legs and watched us through the bars until we disappeared in the distance.

Mark's story is about an uninvited mascot he had on his first and only solo flight, but he didn't shed any tears when he parted company with his ——, not by a darn sight.

Here's how it all happened: Mark always had been crazy about planes and his greatest ambition was to be a pilot. He worked around flying fields and studied flying in his spare time and looked forward to the day when he could take a solo flight.

Mark got his chance when he visited a cousin of his who lived in Florida and who flew his own plane. The plane, Mark says, was pretty much of a crate but it flew and that's all that was necessary. His cousin didn't have a hangar but used to park the plane in a field the way you would a car.

Well, sir, Mark's cousin was a good guy and started giving Mark lessons in the air. Mark caught on fast and finally the day came for his first solo flight. Mark shook hands with his cousin and, climbing into the cockpit, was soon off to a good takeoff. The plane rose and Mark was at last piloting a plane. He was nervous, he admits, because he didn't want to smash up his cousin's plane, but he had no thought of danger to himself until he suddenly felt a sharp burning sensation in his leg and immediately began to feel sick at his stomach.

The sick feeling persisted so strongly that he feared he might faint, but he never connected it with the burning sensation in his leg until he felt it again. This time it felt as though needles had been driven into the calf of his leg.

When he had reached an altitude of one thousand feet and felt safe to do so, he glanced down at his throbbing leg to see the cause. And what he saw nearly finished him. The hair on his head began to rise. The plane went into a nose dive and Mark fell forward on the controls in a half faint.

His "mascot" was a rattlesnake!

Mark says his sensations were indescribable. He has always had a horror of snakes and to be trapped in such a perilous position with one of the poisonous reptiles nearly drove him frantic. He felt like jumping out of the plane from sheer terror. But he controlled himself and tried to think.

He knew now why he was sick. The snake had bitten him and the venom from the fangs had gone through his system and nauseated him. In a few minutes he would be unconscious from the poison. There were two things he MUST do, get rid of that snake and land the plane!

Mark saw the swampy ground coming up at him and pulled out of his dive just in time. Then he shut off his motor and as he glided toward a field he gritted his teeth and grabbed that snake. The feel of the slimy body, Mark says, was horrible but he held on and threw the rattler over the side.

Familiar landmarks shot by his rapidly dimming eyes. The earth seemed to be dancing crazily. He felt himself bounced high in the air as the landing gear struck. He thought the plane would turn over and crash but he didn't care much if it did; he was too sick to care. His head felt like it was bursting and his throat was torturing him. He let go of the controls and closed his tired eyes!

The next thing Mark remembers was a knife cutting into his leg as the doctor gave him first aid for snake bite. The treatment, the doctor said, was just in time and Mark was up again in a couple of weeks. But he wasn't up in the air. No, sir-ree, that snake bite killed his flying bug and Mark hasn't flown since. And I don't know as I blame him.

Monday I'll be back here with Joe Cook, who is going to tell us, among other things, how cowboys stop a stampeding bunch of cattle.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Lloyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Fred A. Carlson of 57 Deaconess road, Boston, won a hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. BOLES SIGNS UP

Star Joins Paramount

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, May 2—Personal appearances were considered a few years ago a sure sign that an actor was on the down grade. Today our biggest stars realize that this personal contact with the public is extremely important to hold or build a following.

John Boles is the latest actor to benefit from his personal appearances. He has just signed a contract with Paramount for $50,000 a picture and an option which carries his salary into tremendous figures should it be exercised.

Boles, who left 20th Century-Fox, because he felt he wanted to continue his personal appearance tours, and have the right to accept radio engagements, was granted both of these concessions by Paramount. He leaves for five weeks of personal appearances before he reports to his new bosses.

The several people in Hollywood who have wagered that Jackie Coogan-Betty Grable marriage reports is a publicity stunt and will never materialize, may be interested to know that Miss Grable has set the wedding date. But don't get excited, the young lady is playing safe. She says she will marry Jackie December 19, 1937—the day after her contract with RKO, which forbids her marriage, expires.

Well, almost anything can happen in two years. It's not up to me to say who will be the winner or who will be the loser but I have my private opinion. Meanwhile Miss Grable goes into a new movie, "General Delivery."

Mrs. Reinhardt's suggestion that George Bancroft play the coveted role of Danton has brought letters from all over the country. Everyone, it seems, would like to help Jack Warner and Professor Reinhardt cast Danton, the fearless leader of the French Revolution.

From Jacques Lory, correspondent of the Paris Soir, comes a demand that Monte Blue be not overlooked. Says Monsieur Lory: "Monte Blue played the part in silent pictures and gave a fine performance—he looks like Danton, has the mental power and the talent that the part demands. In France Monte Blue is among the favorite actors and this being a French story it is a good idea to respond to that favoritism."

Nat Levine, of Republic fame, had a chance to play a good samaritan when he purchased the screen rights to "The President's Mystery." Published serially in a weekly magazine, this novel was the combined efforts of Rupert Hughes, Samuel Hopkins Adams, Anthony Abbott, Rita Weiman, John Erskine and S. S. Van Dine.

The writers requested that since the original suggestion for the story had come from President Roosevelt, that Levine turn their checks over to the Warm Springs Foundation, his pet charity.

You may or may not have heard the name Douglas Fowley, but if you haven't you will soon. He has just been signed by 20th Century-Fox for a part in "Private Number" and before that he had an important role in "Big Brown Eyes."

The story of Fowley is one that makes you believe in Santa Claus. He came to this town with exactly 30 cents, having staked his all to get to the promised land, and when you meet him you will understand why this boy is going to succeed. He has determination, ability and a great outlook on life.

Snapshots Of Hollywood

SIMONE SIMON, according to a reliable source, giving vent to a little artistic temperament again —too bad because temperament is so old fashioned; DOLORES COSTELLO BARRYMORE paged while on a shopping tour for an added scene at Para; Baby PEGGY MONTGOMERY, the SHIRLEY TEMPLE of ten or more years ago, now playing in "Girls' Dominitory"; WALTER HUSTON will confer with WILLIE WYLER in jail on certain changes to be made on "Dodsworth." WILLIE, as we are told, actually moves into the bastille over the week-end and has asked SHERIFF BISCAILUS to give him a cell with a southern exposure. That's all today.

'Singing Kid' At Modern

Sybil Jason, Edward Everett Horton, Wini Shaw, the Four Yacht Club Boys and Cab Calloway are other popular players in "The Singing Kid."

Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea are featured in "These Three."

At Mayfair

Spy Thrills On Met Screen

By MARION FRENCH

"Till We Meet Again," a fascinating film with Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael cast as sweethearts parted by fate during the World War, and a lively stage revue starring the shapely, blonde Ina Ray Hutton and her Melodears make a very entertaining bill at the Metropolitan Theater this week.

Spy pictures are usually interesting and "Till We Meet Again" is especially so, due to the artful direction, skilful work on the part of the authors, and outstanding performances by the film's principals.

Opening scene show Marshall and Miss Michael in London, where both are stage stars. They are terribly in love and as planning their marriage on the night war is declared between England and Germany. Marshall, an Englishman, knows that his fiance is a Viennese, but she has not told him that she is a spy in the service of the Fatherland.

Miss Michael mysteriously disappears from London without bidding Marshall good-bye and he consents to having his name published in the casualty lists when he becomes a member of the British Intelligence Service. In the meantime, the girl he loves has become a very important figure as a spy in the service of her country. She has made use of her beauty to learn war secrets from soldiers on leave at Monte Carlo and other holiday centers.

Shocked at the supposed death of her sweetheart, the beautiful Viennese carries on her activities in the interests of her country until she finds out the truth about the British officer. They meet again in Germany where Marshall is working as a porter in a munitions factory, posing as a shell-shocked German soldier.

From this point on, many thrilling and exciting sequences follow, with the two love-torn spies trying to escape to a neutral country.

The entire cast of this picture, which includes Lionel Atwill, Rod LaRocque, Fay Bainter and other prominent players, do excellent work. Herbert Marshall is at his best in the role of the British actor who turns spy and Miss Michael has never looked prettier nor acted better than she does here.

The Metropolitan's stage show is a fast-moving and delightful affair. Miss Hutton, dressed in a series of very fetching gowns, leads her talented girl band during some very nice numbers, and contributes several pleasing songs and dances as well. Others who contribute to the program with very fine performances are Jack Pepper, Sam Cantor, Helen Honan, Dorothy Crooker, the Burke sisters and Terry Howard.

Pennington At Derby

The international dancing star, Ann Pennington, famed in Ziegfeld Follies and George White's Scandals, and creator of the Charleston and Black Bottom dances, is the headliner at the new Brown Derby.

Included in the new revue are the co-stars, Melis, Kirk & Howard, with Mickey Brahis, Harry Stevens, the Pomeroy-Earle Girls line, Ben Pulle's orchestra and the Hollywood Studio Show Girls.

Sterling Performance

Mary Servoss as she appears in one of the featured roles of "Tobacco Road," which on Monday enters its fourth week at the Plymouth.

The first three-character play ever produced, it is said, was Goethe's "Stella." When it was revived in Berlin a few years ago, William Dieterle, now directing Kay Francis in "The White Angel," was the star.

Symphony Farewell Tribute

Yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall the last Friday afternoon audience of the regular pair of Boston Symphony concerts gave an enthusiastic farewell to the orchestra and its conductor, Serge Koussevitzky.

Tonight's performance of the same program will be the last concert of the 57th season of this orchestra.

The magnificent performance given to the varied program was in itself sufficient justification for the exuberant quality of the applause.

Vivaldi's concerto in D minor for oboe, viola and organ, edited by Alexander Siloti, proved an effective and vitally enervating work. The concerto of such caliber are altogether too rare.

The poetic reading which Dr. Koussevitzky gave Liadov's two pieces in miniature, "The Enchanted Lake" and "Kikimora" made of them images of sheer witchery.

In the performance of Sibelius' tone poem, "Pohjola's Daughter" which followed, the greater scope of the work lead to heightened results in poetic expression—the various choirs of the orchestra blending and interweaving in translucent and multi-colored patterns.

The concert reached its sonorous and stirring climax in the performance of Brahms' First Symphony.

Here the solidity and precision, the suppleness and richness of the orchestra were contributing elements of a performance that will be long remembered.

Dr. Koussevitzky's molding of the material into a conclusive whole was of course responsible for its significance.

The audience manifested its appreciation in applause that may best be described as exultant, and appeared to refer not to this concert alone but to the many excellent programs which have succeeded during the season now being brought to an end.

ACTION APLENTY

By MARION FRENCH

If you like gigantic spectacle films with thousands of extras, many thrilling action shots of desert warfare, or if you are a Ronald Colman or Claudette Colbert fan, "Under Two Flags," the new picture at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters, will be right up your alley.

This screen melodrama, based on the famous Ouida novel, has an excellent cast. Ronald Colman, famed for a similar role in "Beau Geste," gives a compelling performance here as a member of the French Foreign Legion.

Claudette Colbert, who is of French descent, is cast appropriately as a flirtatious French damsel named Cigarette, who runs a cabaret in the desert. Victor McLaglen is called upon to play a ruthless and cruel warrior and the lady-like Rosalind Russell is seen as a lovely English girl with whom Colman falls in love.

The picture's plot concerns the love triangle involving Colman, Claudette and McLaglen. The latter is the slave of Cigarette and she in turn loves Colman, who has repulsed her advances but kisses her one night impulsively as atonement. Later he falls in love with Rosalind Russell, braving jail to meet her, when she accompanies the English high commissioner to his post.

McLaglen tries very hard to annihilate his rival by sending him to dangerous posts in the desert, but each time Colman, like a bad penny, turns up at the fort where both are stationed. Finally, though, it looks as if he is done for and McLaglen repents and tries to save him by taking his forces into the desert. In the end, however, it is the hopelessly French cabaret girl, Cigarette who comes to the rescue of the man she loves, at the expense of her own safety.

The scenes showing the final battle between the Arabs and French Legionnaires are the most exciting and realistic war shots of this type we have ever seen.

Bob Benchley is on hand to cheer you up after the fade-out of this stirring melodrama. His "How to Behave" is one of Bob's funniest shorts, showing him acting out ways to control the various social problems the average person meets in inimitable Benchley style.

AUSTEN LAKE

Sulky Brevity: Indian Broom May Dust Off Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 2

THE ATHLETIC STEEDS which are being called upon to give their utmost in wind and limb in today's Kentucky Derby, if that word is not too un-American, spent last night amid mystery and suspicion that compares with the general character of a heavyweight fight camp on the eve of big business.

Austen Lake

Beyond the infield, sweet profusion of magnolia and honeysuckle, lay Churchill Downs' low-roofed barns where the royal dobbins were ringed about by enough metropolitan tailmen and guardhouse-watchmen to break a dock strike; thick men with muscular jaws and shoulders suggestive of Derby hats.

Only by written consent, properly endorsed by the commanding watchman, might one pass the skirmish lines and traipse along the dirt alleys between the stables. And always eyes watched furtively from beneath hat brims, trigger fingers twiddled hopefully, and words, harsh as a dog's snarl, warned you when within peanut-chucking distance of the patrician giddyaps. The heavy guard against poisoners, mutilation and all the sinister tricks known among low-life characters, implied that man is not bred with the same careful regard to honesty as the horse.

ROYALTY RAMPANT

PAMPERED DARLING of the Derby betters, Brevity, was in a cell near the center of the horse park. There were vacant stalls on either side, lest mischievous somebodies burrow through and insert a rubber finger in the horse's nostril. A police sergeant lolled around with a fringe of little cartridge-capsules peeping from his belt loops, and the black butt of a service pistol hung under his heart.

And last anyone might wish to insert a shovelful of distress in Brevity's bran and give the colt a tremendous ache in the equatorial region, only the closest intimates of Joe Widener's barn-family were permitted to bring in carrot greens, timothy hay, or hoist drinking pails into the cubicle.

A wire screen, meshed finely enough to restrain a creeping mouse, was swung across the face of the stall, and always, until the padlock clicked back into place, the sergeant watched with his finger hooked suggestively into his belt, peeping at the feeders through narrowed eye-slots.

LIFE IS GOOD

BEING DUMB, though this is not to impugn their intelligence as less than the surrounding people, the Derby steeds carry on their training and loafing free of many of the strains which their human prototypes are subject to in corresponding times. They are not troubled by autograph hunters or compelled to wrap their pen hands in fake bandages as Red Grange once did when his signature-work was about to consume his time and energies from football.

They train briefly in the morning dew while the shell pinks of early morning are in the sky and with a polite crowd peering from a distance. And when they are through, they melt back to the barns to nuzzle the woodwork and throw their brown liquid eyes at the pretty filly, third from the left in the stalls across the street.

BROTHERS ALL

THE GENERAL POPULATION at Churchill Downs, which during the last two days has been the Derby crowd, is not readily distinguishable in bearing or dress from the horse clients who frequent Suffolk Downs or Narragansett. They seem to suffer just as loudly when rooting their favorites home and commit the same hoochy-koochy torsions of the pelvis when their pay-horse churns up the stretch.

But they are better acquainted with their horse mathematics and time-table charts and speak of Bien Joli or Grand Slam or Indian Broom with ready familiarity that a fond parent speaks of a precocious offspring. From the most gorgeous lip-stuck females at the paddock fence to the most worldly swipes who clutter the steerage sections, the language is comprehensive horse lingo.

Brevity, said to be the soul of wit, is likewise a little horse with a sulky disposition which lobby wisemen in Louisville are, increasingly, giving thumbs down as post time approaches. The smart horse among the form scholars is Indian Broom for dry going and Grand Slam for mud. And until you have seen Churchill Downs after a brief rain shower, you have never seen the real thing in Nature's chocolate cornstarch pudding. A rain that falls during the night lies on the track in a thick, sticky smear late into the afternoon, as was the case Thursday. Due to ineffective drain and a hard-pan bottom, the moisture just lies until absorbed by the heat. It is this which, of all our American tracks, makes Churchill Downs the mudder's paradise.

YANKEES Try For 6th STRAIGHT

New York, May 2 (INS)—Their enthusiasm aroused by the winning spurt of the Yankees, a crowd of more than 25,000, one of the largest of the season, turned out this afternoon as the men of McCarthy closed out their two-game series with the Chicago White Sox.

Charley Ruffing, who blanked the Indians in his last start, was on the mound for the home forces. Monty Stratton started for the White Sox.

FIRST INNING

WHITE SOX—Kreevich was thrown out by Ruffing. Stumpf walked. Haas singled. Bonura lined to Johnson, Stumpf scoring. Appling singled, but when Haas tried for third, he was out on Chapman's throw to Rolfe. ONE RUN.

YANKS—Rolfe flied to Kreevich. Johnson was thrown out by Piet. Selkirk walked. Gehrig walked. Kreevich took Dickey's low drive. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING

WHITE SOX—Ruffing threw out Piet. Rolfe pegged out Dykes. Sewell singled. Rolfe took Stratton's grounder and threw to Lazzeri at second, forcing Sewell. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING

WHITE SOX—Kreevich flied to Johnson. Stumpf walked. Haas rolled out to Gehrig. Bonura singled, scoring Stumpf. Appling doubled. Piet flied to Chapman. ONE RUN.

YANKS—Rolfe was forced out on a single. Rolfe walked. Johnson's low liner hit Rolfe on the ankle and he was automatically out. Johnson getting a base. Piet the put out. Selkirk was thrown out by Appling. NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING

WHITE SOX—Dykes was thrown out by Ruffing. Sewell grounded out, Rolfe to Gehrig. Stratton singled. Kreevich fouled to Dickey. NO RUNS.

YANKS—Gehrig flied to Kreevich. Dickey walked. Chapman singled. Lazzeri forced Chapman at second, Appling to Piet. Frankie Crosetti hit a home run scoring behind Dickey and Lazzeri. Ruffing flied to Haas. THREE RUNS.

FIFTH INNING

WHITE SOX—Stumpf was passed out by Dickey. Ruffing threw out Haas. Bonura flied to Chapman. NO RUNS.

cheer in the opening race when Mayro, with F. Smith up, took an early lead and won by two lengths over Yetive. Mayro paid $6.10 to win, while the place price on the fast closing Yetive was $28.

Mayro was Dava Wilson's Best Bet for opening day, and the racer proved Dave's handicapping perfect, with the decisive win.

Forced Landing Wins

Forced Landing, A. C. V. Whitney horse with Nerney up, won the second race in a nose finish with Midnight Flyer, the favorite. Forced Landing came with a terrific rush in the stretch run.

The finish was so close that the stewards called for pictures. These showed Forced Landing out front by a nose at the finish. Midnight Flyer had a margin of a head on Loloma. Forced Landing rewarded his backers with $22.10 to win, $11 to place and $6.80 to show.

Amador, with V. Thompson up, won the third race to pay the juicy price of $47.20. The daily double, Mayro and Amador, returned $1,070.90 on a $2 investment.

Amador won by a length over Bye Bye Mary which paid $2.10 to place. Retribution finished third and paid $10.70 to show.

Pathos Takes 4th

Pathos with George Seabo up beat out Jackie D., carrying the colors of the Arabo Stable, in a driving finish in the fourth race. The stewards called for pictures which showed Pathos out front at the finish by a narrow margin.

Pathos paid $11.20 to win, Jackie D, a heavily backed favorite, paid $3.70 to place. Jackie D. got off to a poor start, and he late rush was not sufficient to carry him out front.

The Walter O'Hara track was decked up for the opening meeting. Everything has been freshly painted, while the famous electric eye and numerous other new features have been added.

While it was an eight race card, the great crowd centered its interest on the fifth race which was six furlong event. The race brings together some of the greatest sprinters in the world, and was to The flying four year old Clang, the mystery horse, from out of the West, is to carry a great deal of money in this event Clang is owned by John F. By Dave Wilson

The above is this observer's opinion as to the outcome of the Kentucky Derby run today at Louisville with a purse of $40,000 in added money as the magnet.

And in selecting Bold Venture for my top horse I fly in the face of Providence for unquestionably a majority of those whose lot it is to make selections for this all-important classic will incline toward the Widener colt.

Hold Venture, the surviving member of the once-powerful Schwartz Stable, has raced but once this year and then in an over night event at a mile and seventy where he scored a hollow victory.

First and foremost in my thoughts is the fact that Bold Venture is by St. Germain, a mighty sire of one other mighty Derby aspirant, Twenty Grand. And that one won the fastest Derby ever run—that of the year 1931, when he scored in 2 01 2-5.

In a work this year Bold Venture turned the mile and a quarter, the full Derby distance, at Belmont Park in 2.10 breezing, and so impressed was Trainer Maxie Hirsch by this work that he forthwith decided to skip the Wood Memorial, New York's Derby tryout, and shipped forthwith to Louisville.

And here once more Bold Venture turned the full distance in 2 10 and again handily. Three days after this work he was given a speed test at six furlongs in the mud and came home in 1 13.

Brevity, a beautiful thing to look upon and is possessed of a world of speed. He has done everything Trainer Pete Coyne has asked, but yet I hardly look upon him as the equal of Bold Venture, at least not over the full Derby course. Brevity is a half-brother to Osmond, a once mighty horse, which tried to win for Widener in the heap. And in closest attardly feel that Brevity can do any better than his half-brother.

Granville has shown some excellent work in preparation for this race, and in the opinion of both his owner, William Woodward, and Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, the trainer, is at the present time a thoroughly fit horse and equal to the task of repeating the feat of his daddy and half-brother and once more bring home a dozen to the establishment which means plenty headquarters at Aqueduct.

BEES SUSPEND MICKEY HASLIN

Boston, May 2 (AP)—Manager Bill McKechnie of the Boston Bees today suspended Infielder Mickey Haslin, who refused to report for duty until his demands for a higher salary are met.

Haslin, acquired by the Bees in a trade with Philadelphia Thursday, checked out from his hotel and club officials presumed he returned to his home near Philadelphia.

McKechnie disclosed the Bees offered Haslin $500 more than his Philadelphia contract called for, but that it failed to satisfy him.

Derby Dope

60,000 to See Race Classic

Louisville, May 2—Here are the essential facts relating to the 62nd running of the Kentucky Derby today:

CONDITIONS—For three-year-olds, at one mile and a quarter.

TIME AND PLACE—Approximately 4:40 p. m. (C.S.T.) at Churchill Downs. Sixth race on eight-race program starting at 12:30.

VALUES—Gross of $50,150, if 10 entries all go to post, with $40,150 and $5000 gold cup to winner; $6000 to second, $3000 to third and $1000 to fourth horse.

Tom Curtin, Eli Captain Passes Away

Pittsfield, May 2 (AP)—Thomas F. Curtin, Jr., 22, Yale baseball captain ill with leucopenia for the past 10 weeks, died today at St. Luke's Hospital.

Stricken 11 weeks ago at Yale, where he was a senior, young Curtin had undergone 21 blood transfusions in an effort to overcome the disease, a deficiency of white corpuscles in the blood.

A graduate of Pittsfield High School and Choate School he was [illegible] at Yale where he starred [illegible] and baseball.

He figured prominently as a halfback in Yale's defeat of Harvard on the gridiron last fall.

He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Curtin of Pittsfield. Besides his parents he leaves a sister, Mrs. Benjamin Langmaid of Swampscott, and a brother, John, of Williams College.

Hairan Victor In Cup Race

Hyde Park, Eng., May 2 (AP)—The Aga Khan's Hairan, a 6 to 1 shot, captured the Victoria Cup race at seven furlongs today as Ralph Beaver Strassburger's American owned Booth u. held a 3 to 1 ran unpaced.

Hairan won by a length and a ha f from Lord Glanely's Buck and Ball. The late J. Ravlin Prescott Pearl, 100 to 7, ran third. Eighteen ran.

A SPRINTER

Cold Stream, they say, is strictly a sprinter, though The Fighter, by the same size, Bulldog, seems to be able to go on. Bold Venture has a lot of speed, and his trainer, Maxey Hirsch, is as confident as any owner in town.

The mystery horse is Indian Broom, a discard of Mrs. Isabelle Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable and owned by Maj. A. C. Taylor, incidentally, holder of the new record for a mile and a furlong.

Indian Broom, sired by C. S. Bohn and P. A. Martin, of Detroit, are running Forest Play with Grand Slam, but of course, Grand Slam is their real hope. Grand Slam, superior mud runner, has shown some speed in his trials, but mud is undoubtedly his hole card. Not much attention is paid to Mrs. Mary Sanford, owned with the Fighter, but some pretty good names like "Palmer House" William Penn, Chicago, will give Sangreal a fair chance. Silas, 100 to 1, indicates what the "hard boots" think of this Kentucky entry.

France Clinches Davis Cup Berth

Paris, May 2 (AP) — France clinched a berth in the second round of the European zone Davis Cup tennis competition today as the tricolor combination of Jean Borotra and Marcel Bernard defeated China's Gordon Lum and Kho Sin Kie, 6—1, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2.

The remaining singles matches, to be played tomorrow, will have no bearing on the score since France won the opening two singles contests yesterday. France will meet the winner of the Monaco-Holland series in the second round.

Derby Scratches

Banister, Bradley Entry.
Forest Play, Bomar Stable.
Dnieper, Mrs. Widener Entry.
Seventh Heaven, W. C. Gontlos Entry.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS

They're OFF at Narragansett this afternoon. Some hundred thoroughbreds will face the barrier in the opening of the New England racing season at Walter O'Hara's plant.

ETHEL'S CHOICE was my only winner yesterday, paying 2 to 1. CACHALOT placed at $4.00 while TACK ran second, paying $7.90. TARANTO, another choice, finished second while CARE FOR was unplaced.

The bankroll is now $510.40 go-ing into the twenty-seventh day of the experiment.

ANN MARSTERS' BETS
$2 Win Jackie D., Narragansett 4th.
$2 Win Sation, Jamaica 4th.
$2 Win Murph, Churchill 3rd.

Late Special
$2 WIN MAYRO, NARRAGANSETT 1st.
BANKROLL IS NOW $510.40 DAY'S PLAY $8.

This afternoon, I'm betting JACKIE D. in the fourth at Narragansett. SATION should top KING SAXON in the fourth at Jamaica while MURPH in the third at Churchill appears well spotted. It's $2 to win on each.

(At the suggestion of Walter O'Hara, Miss Marsters has set out to determine that conservative bets can result in satisfactory profits, or at worst small losses. Walter O'Hara, Narragansett Park owner, provided the capital with a $1000 gift. Help was turned over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Fund immediately. The remainder will be similarly handled at the end of the experiment. This is the twenty-seventh day.)

20,000 In Guess CONTEST

GAME CLOSES MONDAY

The amazing total of more than 20,000 replies has been the answer to the Ann Marsters' bankroll guessing contest.

And with entries officially open until midnight on Monday, the rush to get in under the wire continues unabated.

The response to Miss Marsters contest in which the winner is to receive $100 for his or her efforts proves conclusively the tremendous hold that the only woman handicapper in New England has developed since she assumed the responsibility of wagering the money entrusted to her by Walter O'Hara of Narragansett Park.

Miss Marsters' original fund of $500 still continues on the black ink side of the ledger, a remarkable feat considering the fact that men handicappers who have spent their entire careers following the horses and who have made selections a life work, have been consistently winding up on the losing end.

There is still time to become enrolled in the ranks of contestants. You have until Monday at mid-night to mail your guess as to her bankroll figures as of the morning of May 16th.

The person who comes nearest to the amount of her fund at that time, through the races of May 16th, gets not only the $100 prize but a season pass to one of the three New England major race tracks

Izzy Harris Gets Tufts Mound Job

The diminutive southpaw, Izzy Harris, starts on the mound again for Tufts this afternoon as Bowdoin visits the Tufts Oval for the annual Junior Day contest

Harris the only star hurler the Jumbos can boast, is proving himself an iron man, for he has won each of his last three starts, while he has hurled more than three innings He has been nicked for a total of only three hits in the last two games.

Kamar Set Down

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., May 2nd: Kamar, jockey on Overstimulate in the third race, was set down by the stewards for five days for unsatisfactory riding. It was the first suspension of the 1936 racing season in New England.

Yvon Robert After Bout With Danno

By Ringside

Robert, the aggressor from the start, scored with the first fall in 28 minutes 27 seconds and the second toss in 10 minutes 16 seconds

Robert used a top body press and arm spread to score both falls. The Frenchman was master of the situation at all times, and showed impressive wrestling form

Ernie Dusek, last of Rudy's seconds, started a bout after Robert won. He hopped into the ring, and created a commotion only to be restrained by one of Robert's smashing right hand punches.

It was no more than a fair night for the four Dusek brothers. Emil Dusek threw Jack Ganson, 6 37, Joe Dusek pinned Heinie Olson 16 09, but Ernie got no better than a draw with Bob "Bibber" McCoy in 20 minutes.

John Sheaman drew with Al Mercury 10 minutes. Tommye Hear beat George Hagen, 10 31 and Carlo Stringari tossed Hermi Olson 13 11 in other bouts.

OSTERMUELLER HURLS AGAINST INDIANS

Mr. Boston Sheriff's First Report

By Jack Conway

Hon. Phil Quinn,
High Sheriff,
Providence County, R. I.
Dear Sheriff:

Now that you have commissioned me one of your deputies it is in order for me to give you a report on what I shall be doing today while I shall be in the good old State of Rhode Island.

I am going down to Narragansett Park to cover the 1936 opening of Walter O'Keefe's $2,000,000 plant for this newspaper, but that is only half the story. Of course I must write articles for this newspaper to keep Mrs. Boston and the five little Bostons supplied with groceries, but off the record sheriff, writing is my business while betting on horse races is my pleasure.

And when it is possible to mix business with pleasure, as will be the case today, everything is okay.

As one of your deputy sheriffs I shall have a decided edge on touts who in the past caused me to shift from my own winning selections. I hereby warn all touts, and this also goes for birds who own and train horses, that I shall have to ship them to the Pawtucket lockup if they insist that I bet on Never Won when I'm all set to buy one of those new $15 combinations on Also Ran. If I am to lose my dough sheriff, I like to call my own shots.

On my way to the races, I always act as my own handicapper, but once at the track I feel neglected if somebody does not hand me some last minute information. And that, sheriff, usually is the difference between eating at the Ritz and some one arm spot after I return to Boston.

The railroad people apparently know their racing as they sell you a round trip ticket when you leave Boston. Then if you don't tear up your ticket with some of your losing mutuel coupons, you at least do not have to walk home.

RACING HOPES

IN YOUR long experience in public life, sheriff, you have met a lot of guys who even have hope when they are about to start on the last mile. That's the way we bettors feel today as we prepare to knock the mutuel department at Narragansett for a loop.

I was on the last train that pulled out of Narragansett Park last fall and I didn't hear any cheering. It had been a sad day for some of us handicappers. Some of the boys were figuring whether their legs would stand up if they were obliged to walk to Florida for the winter races. None of them shed any tears because the New England racing season had ended. A few of them however did think they might do better in the South Trail. A few betters have. The next track is always the one that is going to do right by them.

But that was last fall, sheriff. We have all found new bankrolls and are now hopeful we have winning systems. They talk about the country being in a depression sheriff, but folks always seem to be able to dig up fresh money when the racing season bobs in on us.

We all feel that this is our year. Now if anything goes wrong with our system it will be the fault of the horses, the track, the stewards, the placing judges, the electric eye, the jockeys or the boys in the press box. We won't admit that perfect racing systems can go wrong.

O'HARA LUCK

THE weather man has even been good to us racing fans. Perhaps this is all a part of the O'Hara luck which people speak about. Walter has had the touch of Midas and maybe he also has some control over the weather.

Brother Neal who is a 14 shot as a toastmaster, even can predict the kind of weather there will be for one of the big racing events at Narragansett. The dolls were pleased when Neal said the weather would be perfect today as they haven't had much chance to go on parade with their new spring styles this year.

I don't know whether my job as deputy sheriff gives me the right to look the dolls over, but I'm going to do so anyhow. Narragansett Park always attracts the swanky set, and they are not tiring on the eyes.

Judge Day Bill Foley and everybody else in Who's Who and What Not will be there. Judge Day intends to specialize in the Daily Double. He clicked with one of the big doubles last season which means he will continue playing Daily Doubles until he has given all of his winnings back.

Yours for success,
Deputy Ma. Boston.

Cleveland Baseball Players Take Spinal Tests

so long as no danger was discovered.

WARVEL "NO KISSES"

Before the Cleveland players were allowed to leave the room however, Dr. Fredrick J. Bailey, deputy health commissioner, warned them that they must observe the utmost care for the next three weeks.

"They must not kiss their wives, child or sweethearts in the mouth and they must be careful in using the same utensils as others," he said. "If they must, they must wash the utensils with boiling water."

Extraordinary precautions were taken before the Cleveland players were allowed to leave the hotel.

INDIAN STAR MAY DIE.

Taxicabs had transported the players to the ball park were ordered disinfected. The entire team was sprayed with germicidal solution and the Fenway Park dressing room by the Indians. Towels used by the Cleveland players were ordered burned.

"It will be much better to let them play in the open air than to huddle them together in the hotel," Dr. Bailey said after announcing the results of the cultures.

Campbell is in critical condition at St. E. zabeth's Hospital but he has a chance for recovery.

He has no chance of playing ball again this season and even the blood he may never play again, if he does recover, Dr. Frederick J. Bailey, deputy health commissioner, declared.

Whether the same fate is in the cards for some of the rest of the Cleveland American League team is the question which could find answers as the cultures of other players were taken from a Thirty-two players and reporters crowding with the club were cultured and a most close scrutiny.

Should no danger signals develop the team probably will proceed tonight to Washington where its next game is scheduled. Results of the cultures are to be forwarded to that city Monday.

Dr. Bailey, in charge of the communicable diseases division of the city health department, assisted by his aides, gave the cultures to the players.

He said he had discovered that had used a common drinking glass on occasions and that they had played cards together.

Could be discovered spitting on the floors, he said, because players may get infections or fingers in handling coin, which means six germs abound in the mouth of an infected person.

HIS THIRD STROKE

It is the third time in a year that Campbell has been stricken with the disease. Dr. Bailey said that this is a sign that the player is a carrier of the germ.

Dr. Keeler ordered that the suites used by the Cleveland club in a Boston hotel should be isolated that all walls, furniture, dishes and other equipment be thoroughly disinfected and that all bedclothes, towels and similar articles used by them be burned.

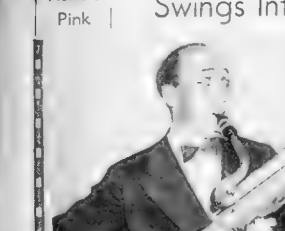
KAY STAMMERS Retains Title

Bournemouth, Eng., May 2 (AP)—Kay Stammers, English star, retained the British hard court tennis championship today, defeating Anita Lizana of Chile, 7-5, 7-5 in the final round.

Girl Music Star Honors Pink

Ina Ray Hutton

Swings Into Pink Line



RHYTHM THAT IS—Ina Ray Hutton, Blonde Bombshell of Rhythm, directs Joe Rines, head of the Mayfair band. Both will be guests at the Night Pink Final dinner at the Club Mayfair tomorrow night. Miss Hutton is now at the Metropolitan.

Ina Ray Hutton, girl orchestra leader and singer, today was added to the list of those going to attend the Boston Evening American's Night Pink Final dinner at Club Mayfair on Monday night.

Denny Shute of Brae Burn Country Club, Professional Golfers' Association champion, accepted the invitation to the Night Pink Final dinner, rounding out the sparkling list of representatives from the sports world.

The dinner Monday night is being staged to honor the late afternoon edition of the Boston American, which prints the news the day it happens, and features horse racing, big league baseball and other sports results.

The dinner is open to the public, and reservations may be made with Benny Ginsberg at Club Mayfair, Liberty 0100. With no extra charge despite the many headline numbers in the program, the dinner will score the biggest success in newspaper history for such an affair.

Governor James M. Curley is a guest of honor, with State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Fire Commissioner Edward McLaughlin, Park Commissioner [illegible], District Attorney Wendell J. [illegible], The American League will send Manager Joe Cronin, Coach Al Schacht, Jimmy Foxx, Wes Ferrell and Lefty Grove of the pennant bound Red Sox. Al Simmons, Schoolboy Rowe, Hank Greenberg or Irving Burns, and possibly Manager Mickey Cochrane of the World champion Detroit Tigers.

President Bob Quinn and Secretary John Quinn will bring the greetings of the Bees and the National League.

Pat Hanley, B. U. grid coach, Jack Sharkey, ex-heavyweight ring champion; the Rev. Francis P. [illegible], New England Director of the Knights of Columbus, Wilson of Suffolk Downs, Lou Smith of Rockingham Park and Walter O'Hara of Narragansett Park; Ben Levine of the N. E. A. A. U.; and Sylvia Reenan of Brockton, national women's javelin throw champion, are other noted guests.

Mickey Alpert, extending his engagement as master of ceremonies at Club Mayfair until Monday night, will help keep the dinner scene moving at a merry pace. Irene Bordoni, Joe Morrison and Hal LeRoy, featured artists in the RKO Boston Theatre revue, will be stage headliners at the Pink Parade, with Jeannette Carroll, singer.

Denny Shute Accepts Bid To Fete

Princeton Picked To Win Races

Harvard, M. I. T. and Princeton open the local 1936 rowing season with a gigantic splash, in their annual triangular regatta, the Compton Cup races, on the Charles today.

It is the first test of the year for the Crimson eight, which is scheduled to match strokes with every outstanding shell in the East, including Columbia, M. I. T., Princeton and Yale.

It is, perhaps, the final test for Whitwell, himself, prior to his seventh year as head coach of the Harvard flotilla, who this spring has assumed command not only of the varsity and juvees but the crewing transition plans as well.

The future of the Harvard boat, never extraordinary over sprint distance, depends upon its ability to stave off the bid of the veteran holds a decisive over Columbia, though it lost to the University of Pennsylvania.

Princeton, despite that defeat, has one of its greatest crews, captained by Gordon Lough, six foot four inch giant from New York City, regarded by many rowing experts as one of the greatest oarsmen in Eastern history.

The Tiger eight is composed entirely of seniors and juniors in fact, only two sophomores have been able to crash the junior var sity shell, so well supplied is Princeton with experienced sweepers.

To match that array Harvard will start the season with a veteran stroke by a sophomore, Jimmy Grace, of New York, and with two other sophomores in important seats, John Clark, number 6, and Doug Erickson, number 4.

Varsity—Princeton Tech Harvard Columbia. Harvard, Yale, Columbia. Freshman—Harvard, Princeton, Tech Columbia—Yale—Harvard, 3rd. Varsity—Tech, Princeton

The Varsity 8-pound race will open the regatta at 3:30 o'clock, Tech and Princeton rowing over the Henley distance of 1 3-16 miles.

McKechnie Not Worried By Haslin

Pittsburg, May 2—Despite Mickey Haslin's refusal to sign a contract with the Boston Bees, Manager Bill McKechnie was confident today that he would have the services of the Bees by the Phillies in exchange for Pinkey Whitney, refused by the Phils for the season. Last year he batted .305 and fielded .931.

Soph Gavin Stars In B. C. Victory

Fight Results

Mat Results

TRADE Leaders Avoid POLITICS

'NEW DEAL' IN DISPUTE

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

Washington, May 2—A valiant, though not entirely successful, attempt was made by the program builders for the convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which held its 24th annual convention here this week, to keep politics out of the meeting.

The truth is that the "New Deal" has so interjected itself into the economic fabric of the nation that the borderline between politics and business has become virtually indistinguishable.

It took no detective to determine that on balance the delegates from the workshops and sales rooms of America tend to be "anti-New Deal."

Most business men are gauche in matters political. Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas at our first meeting last October, conceded as much. Incidentally, Mr. Landon, who succeeded as an independent oil operator, is an exception to the rule that business men lack political sense. Former President Hoover's difficulty in handling Congress reflected his long years earlier in life as a business executive who was accustomed to give orders and push buttons.

It is still an open question how much of the business opposition to "New Deal" policies will percolate down to their employees.

Any effort to use "strong arm" methods in forcing their views down the throats of workers is bound to be self-defeating. As a matter of fact, it would be a bad principle for employers to seek to interfere in the slightest with the free choice of their employes at the polls.

On the other hand, no realistic observer of American affairs doubts that the legitimate influence of business leaders will, their subordinates is far-reaching.

What course is open to pay envelope fillers in the next six months?

Any attempt to inject narrow political partisanship into employer-employe relationships would be unpardonable.

Likewise, any effort to create a fear psychology against the present incumbents in Federal office would be against the best interests of the country.

Employers, in their communications with employes, ought to go no further than to interpret honestly the effect of policies on the success of business. Any data handed on to employes should be based on honest fact-finding and should be devoid of ex-parte treatment.

Contrary to the assumption of radical propagandists, the majority of the gainfully employed respect their chiefs and look to them for leadership.

Business men as such should have no politics. Political preferences should be confined to their activities as private citizens.

But this self-imposed inhibition need not deter factual presentations on such matters as the cost of government, the incidence of taxation, the effect of tariff changes, and of other economic trends and developments.

LEWIS HANEY ON TREND

Sound Money Must HAVE STABLE VALUE As Exchange Medium

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, May 2—In answer to recent questions from readers in Seattle, Detroit and Pittsburgh, I present the following answers:

(1) What is "sound money?"

Ans.: Sound money is any medium of exchange which is freely accepted in payment for goods because it has a generally recognized and stable value.

In order to have such a value, money must consist of or be based upon some material object which is both scarce and desired by individuals. In other words, it must have an objective value of its own.

This value must be as stable as possible, and not subject to arbitrary political manipulation.

The monetary material must be convenient for use.

In serving as a medium of exchange, money must measure the values of the goods which it serves to exchange. This is why it must have value itself. You can't measure anything except by using some instrument that has in itself the quality you want to measure. (You can't measure length except with a yardstick which has length.)

(2) Must notes and bank deposits be payable in gold?

Ans.: If we are on the gold standard, yes. They must be payable in whatever the standard money is. (Thus note issues and bank credit must be limited with regard to the supply of standard money.)

(3) Are any changes desirable in the gold standard?

Ans.: Yes. The use of gold for actual circulation should probably not be permitted, but gold should be payable in the form of bullion. This would save costs and losses, and would discourage hoarding. Perhaps, too, provision should be made for limiting payments on demand, in order to prevent sudden "runs."

(4) Why does the gold standard break down in great depressions?

Ans.: Because we quit living up to that standard in the preceding booms. We over-extend credit, which means huge debts in excess of the possibility of payment. In order to make any monetary standard work, we will have to learn to control ourselves in our borrowing and spending, so as not to go beyond our means of paying.

(5) What difference is there in the security of greenbacks or non-interest bearing notes and Federal Reserve notes based on government bonds?

Ans.: First, Federal Reserve notes are backed 40 per cent by gold certificates, and are thus limited in quantity.

Second, government bonds are also limited in quantity in three important ways: (1) they have to be redeemed at maturity, (2) they have to pay interest, and (3) they have to be sold to investors. The government can issue no more bonds than it can induce banks and others to buy, and it has to pay interest in order to sell any at all.

But issues of irredeemable non-interesting bearing notes (greenbacks) can just be printed and issued in any amount, regardless of the government's ability to pay them off in anything of value. So they rapidly depreciate.

(6) Isn't private capital put into use in buying government bonds?

Ans.: No. If private "funds" go into such bonds, they are diverted from functioning as private capital, and go into non-productive "uses." In fact, very little private funds is put into such bonds. The government has merely been buying its own bonds with forced loans at no cost. Bank deposits have increased about in proportion to government debt.

(7) Aren't "public works" as essential as the tobacco and ice cream industries?

Ans.: That depends on what you mean by "essential." Man could exist without either. But there is this big difference. As individuals, we want and are willing to pay for tobacco and ice cream. Rightly or wrongly, they seem worth while to us. So some of us produce tobacco, and others ice cream, and we are glad to trade one for the other. Thus both have purchasing power.

No individual in his senses would waste his own time on most of these "public works" stunts.

BOSTON Leather Mart REVIEW

UNDERTONE IS STEADY

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Buyers adn sellers views differed in the Boston leather market this week, according to the Shoe and Leather Reporter.

But despite this the undertone of the market is characterized as steady, although somewhat more quiet than the trade would like.

Buyers showed a disposition to operate in a fair to good manner, the trade paper says, but their views differ materially from those of tanners. The latter point out that average basic raw stock costs are pretty uniform, which should operate against any general acceptance of lower price levels.

In the shoe division, the "Reporter" says reorder business during the week was a bit more encouraging. However, taking the country as a whole, factories have not yet found it necessary to step up production to care for this demand. Previous improvement in retail sales materially lessened manufacturers' holdings and shipments against old orders moved in a more active manner. Follow-up or second purchases have not assumed proportions large enough to warrant material increases in schedules.

Notebook: The American Institute of Finance, consistent counsellor of sales before the recent break, is more hopeful . . . In the bulletin out today we notice an even dozen buying suggestions . . . All under the market . . . In fact under recent lows, but not so far that the proposed buying program fails to be susceptible to cheerful views . . . South Porto Rican Sugar took quite a pasting during recent selling . . . Mostly because of the independence bill in Congress . . . We hear the company is doing much better . . . And an increased or extra dividend is likely by fall . . . We would favor it on another dip.

"The stock market is in one of those "don't know what to do moods." Today it begged the issue of whether to dip down before an attempt to complete a full technical rally or keep right on traveling the upward path. Potential news happenings get the credit for such a performance. Regardless of expressed German ideas toward Austria it is a fact the Nazi influence is feared. The prestige of Austrian leaders has been weakened through financial misfortune and an internal Nazi movement is considered with trepidation by some American observers.

Gleanings: The London dispatch of Wylie King, supplied us by Universal Service, hints at trouble for certain brokers in the City . . . Next Thursday is fortnightly settlement day and two firms are rumored as embarrassed by losses in American markets, according to the reliable Mr. King . . . This has not dampened British ardor for our markets however, and Mr. King reports a leading commentator as saying the present is an opportunity to acquire very carefully selected Americans on more reasonable terms.

MARK AIR MAIL ANNIVERSARY MONDAY

Thirteen airplanes flying in a V of Vs with left files blank in a memorial salute to departed pilots were to circles Greater Boston this afternoon to herald the observance of "Air Mail Week" beginning Monday.

The observance will be climaxed Monday noon at a luncheon in Hotel Bradford and ceremonies being arranged by postal officials and the Crosscup-Pishon Post of the American Legion, made up of advertising representatives and the post's aviation committee, headed by Dan Rockford.

THREE-FOLD PURPOSE

First they will mark the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the Boston-Newark Air Mail Route No. 1. Second, they present publicly the claims of Boston as a terminus for the proposed trans-Atlantic air service and third pay tribute to New England pilots who sacrificed their lives in the war and in air mail service and praise pioneers of that service who are living.

National, state, city and prominent aviation officials will be heard at the luncheon. Governor Curley and Mayor Mansfield have accepted invitations. Others will include C. R. Smith, president of American Airlines; Postmaster Peter J. Tague, John F. Dinand, New England superintendent of railway mail service, and Pilots Ray Wonsey, Owen O'Connor and Charles Martz. Commander Armes will preside.

Colonel Stedman Hanks, head of the Massachusetts Aero Commission, is expected to give a report on Washington progress of plans to expand Boston airport, if some other government official is not present to do so.

AIR MAIL WEEK

The governor has issued a proclamation setting aside next week as "Air Mail Week." He has also designated the seven-day period as "Junior Birdmen Week" and a party of outstanding Junior Birdmen are to be guests at the luncheon.

Beginning at 2 p. m. after the luncheon a sound motion picture of cruises by Pan-American Clipper ships around South America will be shown. Junior Birdmen are invited to see the picture, which will last an hour.

SPECIAL CACHET

An air mail exhibition at the luncheon will include a silver sack indicative of the air mail traffic of 1926 and the heap of sacks carried during the last year. A special cachet, designed by Ralph Heard, Boston artist, will also be on hand, together with Boston air mail collections. Mail dispatched at the luncheon will be sent to the 300 airport cities in the country.

Preceding the luncheon will be ceremonies at 10 a. m. in Postoffice square where a bandstand for 50 persons has been erected. A guard will be provided by the band of the postoffice employes post of the Legion and there will be an old Postmaster Tague and other postal officials.

The governor's proclamation on "Air Mail Week" will be read and an air mail exhibition will be shown.

Cut Cream Price

A two cent reduction per pint in the price for wholesale cream is anticipated within the next few days by Joseph C. Cort, state milk administrator.

TOURISTS DEPART

Tomasello's Widow to Sail

Mrs. Frances Tomasello, widow of the late Joseph Tomasello, well-known contractor, will sail in London, Italy, with her daughter, Miss Rosaria, her son, Anthony, and her sister, Mrs. Marin Scniaro.

Mrs. Tomasello, who is going to Europe for a rest, will be on board the Italian liner Vulcania, which sails tomorrow noon from Commonwealth Pier, South Boston, en-route to Mediterranean ports and the Azores.

The party will also visit Florence and Rome where they will have an audience with Pope Pius.

Others sailing aboard the luxury liner are Manuel Gomes of the Hawaiian Islands, who came from Honolulu to embark at Boston, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Simmons, of Boston, General and Mrs. Edward L. Logan, accompanied by Captain Malcolm J. Logan, Jr.

The liner, in command of Captain Roberto Somigliana, will carry about 500 passengers, including more than 200 who embark here. The liner arrives here Sunday morning from New York.

Sailing tonight aboard the Cunard White Star liner Carinthia, enroute to Glasgow, Belfast and Liverpool, are William Dana Orcutt, Boston author, with his wife and son, Philip Dana Orcutt; Miss Adele Rawson, of Back Bay, making her annual tour to Europe; Miss Miriam Cross of Belmont, who will return to this country on the maiden voyage of the Cunarder Queen Mary; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Cadigan, of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Clare, of Brookline.

U. S. TO BUILD SHIP FOR SHIP

Copyright, 1936, by International News Service.

Washington, May 2—Congress today served notice to world powers that America is prepared to build battleship for battleship to maintain naval parity as a guaranty of peace.

"If you leave the lock off your door you invite trouble. We are going right ahead with replacements to build the navy up to treaty limits.

"An adequate national defense is the best surety for the world peace America hopes for."

Representative Vinson said, made at the Washington and London naval conferences a sincere attempt to effect world disarmament, scrapped ships and halted building for 10 years, only to find that other world powers were going right ahead building powerful navies.

"We're not going to be taken in again," he said. "We are determined to maintain the 5-5-3 ratio and a navy second to none."

Beg Pardon

Ogden, Utah, May 2 (AP)—George Shaw, charged with running past a stop sign, explained:

"There were two ladies in the car, which made the front seat crowded. I was too modest to squeeze her and shift gears."

"Two days—suspended," said the judge.

New England Police Stories

'Because I Love Her'

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Slayer of Sweetheart Gave Old, Old Reason

This is the 88th in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Frank C. McLean, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of "Because I Loved Her."

By FRANK C. McLEAN

If it's murder mysteries you like, here's an unsolved one for you!

It's unsolved in spite of the fact that the victim, a girl, has been in her grave this five years past, and the slayer, who confessed the killing, has been for five years committed to the living death of a "lifer's" sentence at the state prison in Charlestown.

There was nothing for police detectives to do in the investigation of this murder, because the guilty man, Abraham Goldenberg, 23, of Lorna street, Mattapan, took a taxicab, at his own expense, from the scene of the crime to police headquarters, where he said quite simply:

"I've just killed my sweetheart. Here's the gun!

"I loved her. That was why I shot her."

Old, Old Story

Police had heard that story before. There was nothing new about it. But, having heard it, police couldn't explain it. Nor could the psychologists and the alienists who subsequently examined Goldenberg.

Goldenberg, at the time of the murder, was temporarily jobless. He had been a meat-cutter in an Everett market, and he had been fired.

But that, to Goldenberg, was no terrible calamity. He lived at home with his parents. He wasn't married. His intended wedding could wait a little, if necessary. And there were plenty of sharing women in the race he had lost.

Certainly, it wasn't economic pressure which impelled the youth to his desperate act.

Neither was it drunkenness or insanity or unbridled temper.

Very much master of himself Goldenberg was when he walked into the office of Captain Matthew Killen, to explain that his former fiancee, pretty Lillyan Franks of Dayton ave., Malden was lying dead or dying in Franklin Field, Dorchester, her body pierced by four .38 caliber automatic pistol bullets.

Goldenberg wasn't suffering from delusions or hallucinations, either. Inspectors John Manning and William Crowley soon assured themselves of that. They rode in a police prowl car to the spot described by the slim, sleek, dark-haired killer. There Lillyan Franks lay, in a pool of blood, just as Goldenberg had said. Her heart was still beating, when they found her, but she breathed her last before the ambulances could get her to City hospital.

The taxicab driver who had brought young Goldenberg to police headquarters couldn't shed much light on the facts back of the grisly slaying might have had.

He said:

"The kid hailed me at Codman square. That's pretty near a mile from where you say you found the murdered girl. Goldenberg, if that's his name, told me he had been in a little auto accident. He said he wanted to be taken to headquarters, he knew somebody here who could fix him up.

"All the way in town, he kept chattering with me. We talked about the Schmelling-Sharkey fight and sports generally. The kid had quite a lot to say, too, about auto insurance and what it was to carry it, what with the cost and all. He certainly didn't act to me like a fellow who had just shot his sweetheart. But that don't prove anything. It's a funny world."

The happenings of the murder night, January 9, 1931, didn't seem funny to the parents of either of the principals in the tragedy.

Goldenberg's mother, who understood only a little English, heard a newsbroadcast over the radio, describing the killing and its aftermath. All she could understand was her son, Abraham's name. Run she knew, very well, that something serious was wrong.

"It's nothing, mother. Abie's in a little accident," her husband told her. "I'll go down town and straighten out the trouble."

Of course, he couldn't straighten it out. And Mother Goldenberg, in the end, had to know the truth.

Even worse was the shock suffered by the parents and other relatives of the slain Lillyan Franks. Mrs. Franks collapsed, required doctors' care.

The murdered girl's father and brother, called to police headquarters, would have wreaked physical vengeance on the pallid Goldenberg, if detectives hadn't restrained them.

3000 at Funeral

Because of the position Lillyan Franks had held in a Malden department store, her circle of friends and acquaintances was large. More than 3000 persons gathered at the Franks home, in Boston avenue, Malden, on the day of the victim's funeral.

That would have been a bad crowd for young Abraham Goldenberg to have been obliged to face. But he was held without bail, of course, facing a charge of first degree murder.

When he was arraigned on that charge, he declined counsel, said he wanted to plead guilty.

"Do you realize the seriousness of the penalty you may incur?" the judge asked the prisoner.

"Sure," said Goldenberg, indifferently.

Yet the state's mental experts pronounced him sane. All he was suffering from, they testified, was "exaggerated self-esteem," with minor psychopathic complications.

"Her family kept butting in and interfering with our romance and her mother broke it up. So I killed her because I loved her."

Last person before Goldenberg to try to plead guilty to a first degree murder charge in Suffolk superior court had been Clarence V. T. Richardson, approximately 20 years previously.

But they wouldn't let Goldenberg sign his own execution warrant. Assigned to defend him was Attorney Timothy F. Callahan. He obtained permission from Judge Harold P. Williams to change the accused killer's plea. To first degree murder, Goldenberg pleaded not guilty. To second degree murder, he pleaded guilty, accepting a sentence of life imprisonment.

That cleared the court docket of the Franklin Field murder mystery. But it didn't solve it.

Lured to Death Spot

LILLYAN FRANKS

ABRAHAM GOLDENBERG

Still unanswered remained the question, "Why do men—and sometimes women, too—kill the persons they love?"

If there is any answer, at all, to the problem, perhaps it's contained in the following statement, a statement given by young Goldenberg exclusively to the late Jim Smith, who, before his recent death, was one of the best known reporters of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser staff.

Smith obtained the statement from the confessed killer in the latter's cell at the Charles street jail.

"If it doesn't solve the mystery of Lillyan Franks' murder, maybe there isn't any solution. You can decide that for yourself.

Anyway, here's Goldenberg's story as he told it to Jim Smith:

"I loved Lillyan from the moment I first met her at Revere beach last summer.

"A girl friend of mine introduced me to her while I was sitting on the sand. I went in swimming with her and the more I talked with her the more I loved her.

"I guess she liked me from the start, too, because she invited me to come over to the cottage where she was staying that night. There were a lot of her friends there and we had a great time. She told me before I left I could see her again next day, and I was with her every day after that until her vacation ended.

"One night she introduced me to her mother over the phone, and her mother invited me to visit the family home in Malden. I went out a few weeks later. That was about the last of August.

"Three weeks after I met Lillyan, she wanted me to give her an engagement ring. I wasn't making much money but I wanted to please her, so I arranged to buy one.

"The one she liked best cost $300. That was a lot of money to me, but it made Lillian happy and I got it on the installment plan.

"A few days later her mother told me I didn't show much affection for Lillyan, that I never kissed her when I came to the house or when I was leaving. I told her I didn't like to kiss Lillyan in front of other people, but to please her I did it often after that.

"We were very happy, and I was saving as much money as I could so we could get married soon. Lillyan was always talking about the home we would have, and whenever we went walking and saw nice-looking babies she would say, 'I hope our children look like that.'

Upset Him

"But about a month ago she seemed to change in her feeling toward me. I worried about it and couldn't sleep at night. Finally the man I worked for complained about my work and said I was acting queerly. Then I lost my job.

"Things got worse at Lillyan's house, and one night her brother told me his folks didn't want me to come out there any more.

"I didn't know what was wrong. I had always been respectful to Lillyan and her mother and I was afraid I might lose my sweetheart."

"That upset me terribly. I just walked around all day and didn't know what I was doing. When I went into places looking for work people looked at me queerly and some of them laughed.

"I worried about everything. I knew Lillyan and I couldn't get married if I didn't have a job and the way I was feeling I knew no one would hire me.

"One night, two weeks ago, I met Lillyan at the car-line in Malden and walked home with her.

"We sat in the parlor and Lillyan cried all night. Her father came downstairs about daybreak. Lillyan had gone up to bed just a few minutes before. Her father talked to me, but I didn't know what he was saying.

"Lillyan didn't want to give me up and she didn't want to displease her mother. The uncertainty was driving me crazy. I couldn't bear to think of living without her. And one night it brought her to my house and told my mother she must stay with us.

"A few days later a telephone call came to Lillyan that her mother was sick and wanted her to come home.

"I asked Lillyan what she wanted to do and she said I guess it's best if I stay at home.

"I had applied for a marriage license a week before and Lillyan had applied for her's the day after. We decided we'd get married as soon as I got a job. She was coming out to my house two or three times a week until last Sunday when she seemed to be turning cold toward me.

"Last Sunday she said to me, 'Al, probably it would be better for all of us if we remained apart for a year and maybe things will be better by that time.'

"I told her that was out of the question. I told her I could not remain away from her for one minute, and I couldn't stand not seeing her for one whole year.

"When I left her Sunday night she would not let me kiss her and I though I would go mad. She ran into the house and left me standing there. I thought then that life would not be worth living if she left me and I wandered around most of the night, thinking how much different things were since the first days I knew her.

Slipping Away

"I saw she was slipping away from me and I thought how terrible it would be if I were in love with anyone else. It was torture, thinking of all those things and being out of work, too. Everything looked hopeless.

"Thursday I called her again hoping I could make her change her mind."

"I asked her to come over to my house that night but she said she could not. I asked her if she was going to see some one else and she said, maybe!'

"I couldn't stand that. I begged her to come over and finally she said, 'I'll meet you at Blue Hill ave. and Angel st. and give you back the ring.

"I went home and got the gun from my room.

"I looked at it for awhile and thought I would end all my troubles and Lillyan's too. I said to myself I would settle the whole thing that night. So I went out and waited for her.

"She got off the car at 8:30 and walked toward me. When I held the ring out to me, but I wouldn't take it.

"I said, 'I don't want the ring. I want you, Lillyan.'

"She said, 'It's no use.'

"I couldn't kill her in front of all those people. I though if the gun didn't work they would arrest me for killing her murder and she would be free while I was in jail.

"So I told her that a friend of mine who was married wanted to see us to give us some advice.

Tried to Speak

"She said: 'No matter what he says I am not going to mind because it's all over between us.'

"Then she said she would go over and talk to him and we could take a short cut through Franklin Field. I thought if I shot her in there no one would see and then I would shoot myself.

"We walked up a little path near some bushes. I told her to go ahead a few steps and as she started forward I stumbled. When she recovered her balance she was crouched down in front of me looking up in my face.

"I had my finger on the trigger of the gun and I pulled it out and fired at her. The first shot struck her in the chest. Her eyes were staring at me and she was trying to speak, I think.

"I think I waited for a few seconds to hear what she was trying to say. But she fell to her knees again without saying anything. I fired again and again—I don't know how many times.

"I climbed over her body, kneeling down at her. She didn't move.

"I shoved the gun into my pocket and ran across the park. I waited a few minutes outside. Then I walked to Codman sq. and got a taxicab and went to police headquarters, where I told them what I did.

"I told them the truth.

Worcester Hit-Run Driver Sentenced

Worcester, May 2—In defense of a hit-and-run charge, James J. Ras, 56, president of the Lombard Machine Co., told him he didn't stop because he didn't want anyone to smell liquor on his breath. Sergeant Fred Maloney testified in court here today.

Ras, charged with operating negligently, and with leaving the scene of an accident after overturning another car and injuring four persons, was given two concurrent sentences of two months each, sH appealed.

U. S. S. Drayton Victim Dies

Bath, Me., May 2 (AP)—Merton M. Oliver, 34, of Phippsburg, one of four pipe fitters burned by steam aboard the recently launched destroyer Drayton Thursday, died in a Bath hospital early today.

New Weapon

Los Angeles, May 2 (AP)—Suing for divorce, Mrs. Janet R. Sweet told the court her husband once beat her with a dead jackrabbit while they were on a hunting trip. She won the decree.

Politics Windfall Means 'Just Nuts'

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Speaking about the new taxes, nobody understands what windfall means. Windfall used to mean apples, pears and nuts that had been blown off the trees by the high breezes. In this case it means just the nuts.

* * *

If the fruit of another man's tree drops in your yard it is legally a windfall. It is something you didn't expect to get.

* * *

But once you get it, it's yours forever and a day. So are the taxes. If a hurricane smacks you in the face with a dead cat, that also is a windfall.

An "Insidious" Organization

THE Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution at its recent annual convention took a militant patriotic stand when it branded the American Student Union as "THE MOST INSIDIOUS AND WELL-DIRECTED UNIT IN AN ATTACK AGAINST THE AMERICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT."

The American Student Union, in spite of its cunningly chosen all-inclusive title, is NOT REPRESENTATIVE of the great body of our college students, who are loyal Americans, thoroughly imbued with the doctrine of American individualism.

Formed at Columbus, Ohio, last January, the ANTI-American Student Union represented LESS THAN 2 PER CENT of the total college attendance in the country.

The leading officers, Joseph P. Lash and Celeste Strack, are NOT STUDENTS.

IT IS an "insidious" organization, as the D. A. R. has pointed out, because it is one of those numerous alien-minded bootlegging organizations that are springing up everywhere throughout the country. These organizations are revolutionary in intent and disloyal in effect, although they seldom or never mention "Communism" in their resolutions.

The American Student Union is pledged, under the "Oxford oath," NOT TO COME TO THE DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES EVEN IF IT IS ATTACKED.

It makes war on "militarism" in the United States—but is silent on militarism in Russia.

It aims at the abolition of the R. O. T. C. in our colleges—but supports UNIVERSAL COMPULSORY ARMY SERVICE IN RUSSIA.

The American Student Union clamor for "academic freedom" when its Communistic dogmas would destroy EVERY VESTIGE OF FREEDOM IN AMERICA, ACADEMIC OR OTHERWISE.

The Nicaragua Route

THE NATIONAL RIVERS AND HARBORS CONGRESS, which is to meet soon at Washington, D. C., will be asked to throw its support to the proposed Nicaragua Canal project.

The Hearst newspapers have frequently pointed out to Congress and the public that a Nicaragua Canal, to supplement the Panama route, is vitally needed for the national defense—a view in which naval authorities have whole-heartedly concurred.

Now comes Colonel Dan I. Sultan, of the Army Engineer Corps, with an apparently irrefutable argument for the Nicaragua Canal as a commercial benefit to every part of the whole country.

Colonel Sultan's figures find, in terms of ship tonnages, that the Panama Canal, in the reasonably near future, will become utterly insufficient to accommodate a steadily increasing maritime traffic, of which our own ships form a very considerable part.

The proposed Nicaragua Canal provides the only facility to meet this coming exigency.

The Nicaragua route is thus DOUBLY JUSTIFIED as a sound project on the scores of both NATIONAL SECURITY and NATIONAL PROGRESS.

Air Mail Week

AIR MAIL WEEK will be observed in Boston beginning on Monday.

This celebration will mark the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the Boston air mail service.

In 1926 the total mileage covered was 4300 miles. This year air mail routes from Boston call for 31,000 miles of travel, an increase of 700 per cent.

In 1926 a total of 326,000 letters were flown from Boston, and in 1935 more than three million letters were carried out of the city by the same service. This was an increase of more than 1000 per cent.

Governor Curley, Postmaster Peter F. Tague and many other notables will participate in public exercises in Postoffice square on Monday morning, when the celebration opens.

Thousands of Boston residents should join in making this occasion an event long to be remembered.

J. P. Manning Again Honored

THE reappointment of Joseph P. Manning as a trustee of the Boston City Hospital by Mayor Mansfield assures residents of the city that the progress of this popular institution will not be retarded.

Mr. Manning, who is one of the most striking figures in Boston business, has served 25 years as a trustee of the City Hospital and since 1918 he has acted as chairman of the board.

Under his leadership millions have been expended in progress. Many new buildings have been added, modern equipment acquired, and today the institution rightly takes its place among the leading hospitals of the nation.

Your Ship Might Come In. Be Ready

THERE are two kinds of men: One kind sits down and waits, the other KEEPS ON GOING, doing something. You see both in this picture. Millions like them are scattered over the United States. They are the young men with "nothing to do" except follow the old plan to "wait until their ship comes in." While they wait let them work. Work brings the ship more quickly.

Some young men, wise, like the one on the right, build a dock out to deep water, making it easy for the ship to land and take them aboard. The other kind sits, whistles or whittles; with such, the idea is that the ship and its crew should be only too glad to do all the work, it is enough for him merely to be alive, and sit waiting to be hauled on board.

THAT KIND WILL SIT A LONG TIME.

The meaning of this picture is that the man who works, studies, reads, thinks and TAKES ANY KIND OF WORK HE CAN GET, WHILE WAITING FOR BETTER, is the man whose "ship" will come in.

That ship is "OPPORTUNITY" and all the opportunity in the world will do us no good if we are not ready and able to seize it, when it appears.

It is good to remember the ancient Greeks' description of Opportunity: a creature with long hair in front but bald in the back. It must be seized as it comes toward us. If we wait until it goes by, there is no way to hold and stop it.

Letters are received from young people, merely complaining. They complain of the times, the depression, the lack of any Government plan, except the bad plan of charity, the dole or an imitation job.

Few of us notice the lack of anything IN OURSELVES, yet there, precisely, is where the chief lack is. Until we realize that, we continue sitting, whistling, waiting and hoping.

It is natural for a baby to sit crying, waiting for the nurse to pick it up and carry it. It is proper for the patient with pneumonia or both legs broken to wait for the ambulance to take him to the hospital. He cannot help himself. But the grown man, and especially the young man, should refuse to play the baby or the invalid. He should look within himself, find out what is the matter WITH HIM, why it is that he sits waiting for somebody else to do for him that which men in the past have done for themselves.

Every one of us can do something, or he can at least TRY to do something.

A baby not able to walk weeps when the nurse doesn't come; and the man with the broken leg waits in sorrow for the ambulance.

The able-bodied man should not wait for someone to pick him up and carry him, or sit crying, because nobody comes.

If you can't be president of a great corporation, then get a job digging a ditch or running errands, and when you get a job WORK at it. Don't sit around wondering why somebody doesn't hand you a better job or how anybody expects you really to work at something that doesn't completely satisfy you. Fortunate is he who realizes that the important thing about work is what it does to OURSELVES.

The young man starting on the running track or entering a gymnasium does not ask, "What am I going to get OUT of it?" He asks himself, "What am I going to put INTO it?"

That is what he should ask when he goes into a job. If you put IN enough every day, training yourself physically, you may rely on results.

If you put INTO YOUR JOB enough energy, from start to finish, you need not worry about the results.

Don't wait for your ship to come in, then run up on the beach and throw a bag of gold in your lap. It won't do that.

PREPARE, BE READY!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 2—Purely personal piffle: Grand descriptive bit by Rebecca West: "Stands out with the nakedness of a shaved cat." Most of the parlor pinks crying for "freedom of thought" never had an idea. I like the Southern double names of Miss Mary Louise, Miss Anna May, etc.

O. O. McIntyre

Biggest thrill of columning: Receiving a fan letter from baseball's idol, Mike Donlin. W. C. Fields can pronounce that cosmetic ingredient "ethyl ether of diethylene glycol" no matter how many. I cannot drive an automobile, tie an evening tie or put a lid on a portable typewriter.

And despite everything, I'll always write it "mental telepathy." No one can look so sparkly entering a room as Ina Claire. Mark Twain implanted a never lost desire to float down the Mississippi on a raft. The first editor to encourage launching this column was Ed Hewe.

For years, when making extra money, I'd buy silk pajamas. Three fortune tellers have warned me of drowning. The sinking type! Nothing symbolizes wealth to me like an elevator in a private home. Sigmund Romberg owned the first police dog I ever saw. And Bide Dudley the first Pom Ravel's Bolero can joust me out of the bluest of funks. And "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling" brings suspicion of tears. On a Sunday dollar excursion to Pittsburgh, I once found a $20 bill in Schenley Park and remained for five days—splitting the town wide open. Our chauffeur talks like Harry Lauder.

Geleit Burgess started the shepherd plaid shirt craze in Paris three years ago. Snappy conversationalist: Al Parker. Will Cuppy calls his hermit's shack Tottering-on-the-Brink. I know a lawyer who spent several hundred dollars trying to repair a furnace. One morning in a rage he began kicking it and ever after it was perfectly dandy. One of the keen critical minds: Harry Grant Dartt. Dutch Treat shows: Schoolboy naughtiness indulged by grown men with capering minds. Communistic strategy: Denying publicly what they try to bring about secretly.

No one makes a magazine cover more interesting than Norman Rockwell. For the man whose teasing left the greatest lessons in human relationships in recent years: Dwight Morrow. Commanding literary name—Everett Rhodes Castle. Ones in Vienna I sat three tables removed, along a sidewalk cafe from Molnar and saw him drink six brandies in a short space. And walk away as straight as an arrow. That's holding liquor.

Memorable evening: Watching Helen and Grace Menken tell their mother for a play she'd had just seen, in the sign language. The last time I made a round of the night clubs I had enough to buy a new suit—and was bored stiff. No one gets more genuine fun out of his home and home life than Billy Seeman, who used to be one of the boys. And that's true of all who have been around and about. Anathema: Chicken cooked any style.

Connie Mack better stay away from Gallipolis, O. In a Saturday Evening Post story he used as a symbol of the ideal. Imagine! When I hear a band tear off Sousa's Semper Fidelis March I'm the returning hero. Bowing from the steps of the private car while the police—both of them—clear the path to the automobile for a drive down Second street. I like to hear Fred Allen say "Really," and have been a push over for every new hair tonic the past ten years. If not for that stitch, Kohler of Kohler would have been a surprising dark horse candidate. Proud autograph possession: That from my favorite English author: "For Odd McIntyre—W. Somerset Maugham, grateful for much entertainment, gladly links his name." I never tire of Eddie Dunbody's banjoing. Am always doubtful about the word dermatology and once bought a pair of real powder puffs from a Milwaukee for a trapeze career. Add careers that go on and on—Al Jolson's.

Words of Wise

There is no royal road in anything, one thing at a time and always in succession.—J. G. Holland.

Whoever perseveres will be crowned—Herder.

Don't tell me what you will do when you have the time to spare; tell me what you did today to ease a load of care.—Granville Kleiser.

Where liberty is, there will be my home.—Thomas Jefferson.

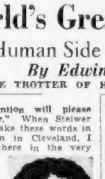
World's Greatest Shows

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

"The convention will please come to order." When Steiwer of Oregon speaks these words in the auditorium in Cleveland, I want to be there in the very front row.



Edwin C. Hill

When Barkley of Kentucky speaks them in Philadelphia, I want to be there, too, in the very front row. Just one month more and the two greatest shows on earth open up for their quadrennial performances, the national conventions of the major political parties of the United States.

For sheer color Ziegfeld never could touch them. For sheer drama they leave a Belasco far in the rear. I have yet to meet a man who has looked on or who has sat in on one of the memorable political conventions and who will not say it was the greatest spectacle of a lifetime.

Having been to quite a few myself, my choice is the Democratic convention in Madison Square Garden in 1924 when, after more than 100 ballots, Smith and McAdoo agreed to throw up the sponge and let John W. Davis make the fight, a fight in which he was beaten before he started, beaten by the very convention which nominated him.

BRYAN'S LAST PLEA

That convention may have seemed funny and childish to those who followed it in the newspapers or by the radio. In fact, it was both when you come to think about it at this late date. But it wasn't funny to the actors or to the chorus of 1000 delegates who sweated and fumed in the heat while Alabama voted 24 for Underwood, and New York 90 for Smith and two for McAdoo.

I can see Bryan now pouring out his eloquence and shouting to the galleries:

"This may be the last political convention I ever will attend."

It was his last! I can look out again on the sea of faces and study the bitterness and hate written on each while the vote was being taken to adjourn the convention to another city, a motion which, if it had been carried, would have meant the end of the Democratic Party.

Once before a Democratic convention had taken such a step, and that step led to the Civil War and the election of Abraham Lincoln. And then there was the hush, the pity and sorrow of those faces as Senator Tom Walsh announced that down in Washington death had come to a little boy, the son of the President of the United States.

Some of my older friends tell me that they will take the Democratic convention of 1856, the Democratic convention of 1912 and the Bull Moose convention of 1912 as their choice in preference to mine.

1912 EXALTATION

"There never was anything like that Bryan 'Cross of Gold' speech; there never will be anything like it!" So one says with finality.

"I was with Teddy in 1912," remarks another, "and for emotionalism and exaltation only Armistice Day in 1918 has come up to what I saw out there in Chicago."

Little things in politics and political conventions have more than once changed the destiny of this republic.

There was 1920 and Frank Lowden of Illinois a favorite for the Republican nomination. Into the convention a bombshell is thrown: one of Lowden's more ardent henchmen had passed some money to get delegates in Missouri.

The result is that the elders meet in a little smoke-filled hotel room and emerge with Warren G. Harding. Second place might have been Hiram Johnson's. He did not seek it, and it went to Calvin Coolidge.

What about June, 1936? What can Smith do at Philadelphia? What support will he have there? Will he be permitted to make a speech if he wishes to? What about Borah at Cleveland? Will he claim a veto power? If he should bolt, would the Democrats endorse him for the Senate in Idaho if he decides to run again this year for the Senate?

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

This is the time of year when an eligible and attractive man goes around with his hand on his pulse, fear in his heart and an alibi on his lips.

He is suffering from a phobia. The marrying-phobia. And every girl who smiles at him looks like a danger-signal. He wishes that he could take out some sort of love-insurance.

This is because he does not understand himself. If he did, he would know that there are certain moods and times when even an impressionable man is woman-proof, regardless of spring and the moon.

So long as a man is husky, happy and contented, his business is going right, his digestion is working on all cylinders, and his friends are plentiful, he need never fear that he will skid into marriage. He doesn't need any woman to sympathize with him.

But when he is lonely or feeling disappointed and abused, he is easy picking for any girl who will listen to his troubles.

No man need fear that he may fall in love with one woman when he is already half in love with several. But when a love-affair has gone on the rocks and he is feeling distrait, disillusioned and bored, he had better watch his step and keep away from women. Especially from the good-little-pal type.

So long as a man is wrapped up in his work, absorbed in his ambitions and filled with his business schemes from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., he hasn't an emotion or a thought left for any woman.

But when the job begins to get on his nerves, work begins to bore him, and the doctor sends him away for a little vacation; then he is like a jay-walker, caught in the midst of traffic. And it is only a question of WHICH woman will get him!

As long as a man has plenty of women to flatter him, admire him and coddle him, he is practically immune to matrimony. He doesn't NEED anybody to help him love himself.

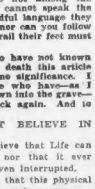
The moment for him to let himself go and choose a wife is when he is feeling on top of the world.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

To you—if you have never lost one you loved by death—this article will have little meaning.

You may imagine that you know what such loss means, but do not fool yourself. Until the stars have been torn from your sky and the heart from your bosom—until you have been drowned in that vast sea of loneliness which lies like a black sea between the Here and the Hereafter—you cannot know what death means to the desolated living. You are not among the initiate. You cannot speak the new and dreadful language they have learned, nor can you follow the shadowy trail their feet must tread.



Elsie Robinson

For you who have not known heartbreak by death this article has, happily, no significance. I write to those who have—as I have—gone down into the grave—and come back again. And to you I say—

I DO NOT BELIEVE IN DEATH.—

I do not believe that Life can be destroyed, nor that it ever ceases, or is even interrupted.

It is obvious that this physical body is—and must be—outgrown. But this does not happen merely in the phenomenon we call Death. It happens many times in our active life.

FEAR OF DEATH

You are not the child you were at seven, nor the youth you were at seventeen. Those young bodies disappeared long since. They are as dead—as completely finished—as any mummy. And you, as you stand today, are as new as any angel—as released from the old body which once you inhabited, which long since you cast off because it grew too small or weak for you.

There is nothing mysterious or mystic about these statements. They are simple facts which any child in grammar school must learn. And if we would follow them through to their logical conclusion, we would have been released long since from our fear of death. But we have never dared follow these facts through just as, for tortured ages, we never dared follow other facts through.

Time was when men accepted the plague as Divine visitation—a cross from God—whose hideous mystery must never be probed. So the plague took its toll of millions. Then at last a few brave men dared to doubt that such a horror was The Will of God. Dared to rebel. Dared to question and experiment. And today the plague is a nightmare that has passed.

And once man endured tragic barriers of time and space—lived walled and fettered by loneliness and silence which seemed inevitable. Today the silence is gone and the space is shattered. Across the heavens wing the airplanes. Along the wave lengths ride song and human voice.

COURAGE NEEDED

There is no corner in his universe—nor any niche in his mental domain—which man dare not explore. SAVE ONE. The terrible taboo of Death still stands as it stood in our jungle days. And, as we did in our jungle days, we bow before it—offer as sacrifice our broken, bleeding hearts, and wail "It is the will of God."

But I, who believe in God and worship Him—I cannot, I will not believe that bereavement is the will of God, any more than the plague was the will of God, or the seemingly impenetrable walls of time and space.

I believe that the horror and heartbreak of death are the products of man's own fear and ignorance, and that we will be freed of them when we are brave enough to dare to doubt—to dare to rebel—when we dare to believe as much in Life as we now believe in Death.

The grave does not matter. The dead body does not matter, any more than your cast off seven-year-old body matters. Life is all that matters. And Life, I believe, passes triumphantly through the shadowy portal of the grave—waits, shining and victorious, in a new and freer form to speak to us again

WHEN AND IF WE HAVE THE COURAGE TO CALL.
